For Assembly,
JOHN HAMILTON, of College,
A. A. DALE, of Bellefonte.

For Prothonotary,
JOHN C. MILLER, of Bellefonte.

For District Attorney,

For County Surveyor,
JESSE CLEAVER, of Unionville.

—Be sure to vote, and vote early.

—Next Tuesday is election day; don't forget it.

—The wise voter will vote early next Tuesday.

—Pennsylvania Republicans must not be weighed in the ballance and found wanting.

—The republican nominees are all in the first column of your ballot mark an X opposite the word republican in each group. Five X's will do the work.

—Vote for Dale, and Hamilton for the legislature. They are both first class men and will be an honor to our county. These are the kind of men an intelligent community like Centre county should have to represent them at the state capital.

—G. W. Zeigler, of Philipsburg, is the Republican nominee for district attorney, a worthy and able representive of the bar. Mr. Zeigler is not only able but he is energetic. He has the gift of eloquence the power of logic. Let him be placed at the post as the people's representative in their demand for observance of the law and his cause is sure to meet with the approval of his constituents. George W. Zeigler should be our next district attorney and he ought to have a good majority. Be sure of this when you vote for Zeigler, you vote for a man the peer of any lawyer at the Bellefonte bar. Vote for Geo. W. Zeigler for District Attorney.

—An excellent National ticket, an excellent state ticket, an excellent county ticket, comprises the Republican ticket. Any voter who votes the whole ticket straight will vote for the best government of the nation, state and county. Never in the history of the republican party has a better ticket from top to bottom been presented for the suffrage of the people. We commend it to your thoughtful consideration. A good government is what we all want. It is not the supremacy of certain men or particular parties but it is principles of government and the character of the men who are to carry those principles into active operation that we should consider. We are certain that honest, thoughtful men who have studied their interest and their duty will vote the Republican tieket in full on election day, and good honest citizens who do not will seriously err in judgment. We do not say that some honest men will not vote otherwise because we believe all men want good government and good men in offices, but we do say that some men will not consider the matter as they should without bias or prejudice and therefore will vote for those men and those principles that carried into legislation will not be for the interest of all the people. Consider well what is your patriotic duty and then do it without fear next Tuesday.

HARRITY PLAYS HIS LAST CARD IN A DEEP GAME.

A Bold Move to Capture the United States Senatorship.

Pattison Used as a Figure-head to Carry Close Legislative Districts.

A WILY BOSS SCHEMES FOR HIMSELF

The Democratic National Chairman Will Not Carry Off the Senatorship, as Republicans Are Alive to the Situation and Propose to Vote for the Regular Republican Candidates for the Legislature.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 2.

What has been suspected for some time has become a confirmed fact—William F. Harrity is a candidate for United States senator. The extraordinary tactics resorted to by the Democratic machine to carry close legislative districts are but part of a deeply planned scheme to capture the legislature and satisfy the latest ambition of this aspiring and crafty Democratic boss.

Harrity has been playing a clever game. His friends have given it out that the Democrats, conceding the state to the Republicans in presidential year, do not propose to make any effort to win anything in Pennsylvania this fall. They have heralded their intention to devote all their energies to raising money to send over to New York to be used there and in other doubtful states. Harrity has had himself interviewed so as to announce that Pennsylvania Democrats have contributed many thousands of dollars more to the national committee's campaign fund this year than in any previous presidential campaign.

Harrity at the Wire.

Meanwhile, the wily national chairman has been in communication by private wire with Chairman Wright, of the Democratic state committee, and his lieutenants in every county in the state. He first saw to it that Democratic candidates for the legislature were nominated who would be favorable to his interests. Then a still hunt was inaugurated in every senatorial and representative district in which there was the ghost of a chance to elect a Democrat. The whole power of the national Democratic organization was exerted in this secret work. Plans were concocted to spread discord in the Republican organization. In a few cases Harrity's agents were successful in bringing about independent Republican nominations, so as to divide the Republican vote with the regular Republican nominee and let Harrity's Democratic candidate slip in.

Desperate Chances Taken.

Desperate chances have been taken in using the machinery of the state department and the ballot commission, in which Harrity and his chief lieutenant, Hensel, constitute a majority, to prevent Republican counties from getting their official ballots printed in time for election day. There has been a most outrageous exhibition in the decisions of this commission, which have been made and reversed as though the sole purpose was to embarrass the county commissioners in the printing of the tickets. After the state department had certified nominations, and the printers had been notified to go ahead printing the tickets, telegrams were sent notifying commissioners that an error had been made, or that some names must be added to the ballot. This was several days after the printers had started in to print the tickets, and in some cases they had finished them.

Harrity's Last Card.

Harrity reserved a "last card," which he played this week. He is banking on it as a big trump. Some weeks ago he had stories printed in friendly newspapers, intimating that in the event of the Democrats carrying the legislature Governor Pattison would be elected to the United States senate. No boastful claim was then made that the Democracy had any show of electing a majority of the legislature. Harrity's idea was to create an impression in certain quarters that the governor would be seriously considered for the senatorship. The scheme was to use his name in a few districts to inspire and bolster up independent legislative nominees, where an intimation of Harrity for United States senator would only draw the party lines closer.

Harrity's last card is in the form of a circular letter bringing out Governor Pattison as a full fledged candidate for senator. It is being sent as a "personal" communication through the mail. Through his close relations with certain gentlemen active in the Pattison gubernatorial campaign, Harrity secured a list of Republicans in every county who voted for Pattison for governor.

A Bogus Appeal.

The appeal is now being mailed to them as though coming from a Republican source, urging them to vote for the Democratic candidate for senator or representative, as the case may be, and thus insure the election of Governor Pattison to the United States senate. Harrity calculates that in a number of close districts he will be successful in influencing enough Republicans to desert their party candidates so as to elect Democrats to the legislature.

Should this scheme succeed, the Pattison mask would be torn off after election day and the Harrity senatorial boom would be launched in full public view. The Harrity lieutenants would then point out that it would be wild politics to send Pattison to the senate and hand the governorship over to a Republican, Lieutenant Governor Watres. Once in the governor's chair, they would argue, Watres could turn the whole executive branch of the state government over to the Republican party. He could oust both Secretary of State Harrity and Attorney General Hensel, and appoint Republicans in their stead, as he could with all other appointees of the governor.

No, it would never do to send Pattison to the senate! Harrity conceived the scheme to capture the legislature, his henchmen would say, and to him the senatorship should rightfully belong.

To Gerrymander and "Michiganize."

A Democratic legislature would need the continuance of a Democratic governor in power to carry out the full purpose of the conspiracy upon which Harrity and his machine politicians are at work. Pattison would have to be kept in the governor's office to sign the congressional and legislative appointment gerrymander bills that would be passed to increase the Democratic representation in congress, to make the state senate Democratic, probably for years to come, and to wipe out many reliable Republican representative districts.

Of course the first thing Harrity would do, with the entire state government in his control, would be to follow the tactics of his friend, Don Dickinson, chairman of the campaign committee of the Democratic national committee, and "Michiganize" Pennsylvania.

When Dickinson captured the Michigan legislature, through Republican disaffection, he passed the now famous bill, electing presidential electors by congressional districts, instead of in the state at large. With a Democratic governor and a Democratic legislature, Harrity could make from ten to fifteen electors from Pennsylvania safe for the Democratic presidential candidate four years hence by "Michiganizing" the state.

Republicans Will Block the Scheme.

Republicans, realizing the calamity that would befall the state should the Democrats get control of the legislature, as well as the executive branch of the government, have awakened to the danger of fritting away their votes on independent candidates for state senator or representative. There has been a marked closing up of the party lines during the last ten days. Republicans have resolved to stand by the regular nominees.

General Clarkson's warning about the close fight for control of the United States senate appears to have been heeded. A Democratic senator from Pennsylvania might have the deciding vote by which the senate would be made Democratic, with the consequent repeal of the McKinley tariff, should Cleveland happen to be elected. Pennsylvania Republicans have awakened to the importance of the situation.

THERE'S MONEY IN IT.

For the man who holds the office of District Attorney, but he has got to farm it to get it out and then it is just that many dollars out of the people's pockets. If spent for a good cause it is all right but if paid in fat fees with no equivalent return then it is all wrong and the people should see that there was a stop put to such high-handed acting. Now this is just what the democratic district attorneys for years past have been doing. They have been farming the office, and the county commissioners have no other course but to pay the bills at the people's expense. And this year the democrats again present a candidate for that office who has been in Bellefonte just long enough to "learn the ropes" and who is itching for an opportunity to present bills to the grand jury which will amount to nothing and then present bigger bills to the commissioners which must be paid. But the people need not thus suffer. The republicans have nominated a man from Philipsburg, Geo. W. Ziegler, a conscientious lawyer; one who is able to discharge all the duties incumbent in that office and who will only ask pay for valid work and work well done. A young lawyer of great ability who will be able to handle the most intricate cases alone and unaided, thus saving a large sum yearly in assistant counsel fees. Such is the man we ask you to vote for, and the man we believe you will elect District Attorney next Tuesday.

—The office of County Surveyor is apparently a not very important one and yet were the people to elect to fill that office a man not fully competent it might prove a very costly office. All county surveying is dependent on him for the correctness of it. To be sure that no mistake be made the citizens of Centre county should elect to that office a man of ability and experience; one fully competent to discharge all the duties imposed faithfully and correctly. Such a man can be found in the person of Jesse Cleaver, the republican nominee for County Surveyor. Vote for him and your vote will be for the right man. Vote for the other man and you are running a risk which may be discovered when too late.

—A vote for Alfred A. Dale is a vote for a man who knows the wants of our county and knows how to frame those wants and needs into law. Vote for Dale.

WILDCAT MONEY DON'T GO NOW.

Business Men Alarmed Over the Proposition to Reintroduce It.

Thousands Desert the Democracy and Will Vote for Harrison.

They Have Inaugurated a Campaign of Their Own and Have Enthusiastic Support from Farmers, Workingemn and All Citizens who Realize the Importance of a Sound and Reliable Currency.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.

The declaration of the Democratic national platform in favor of a return to state banks and "wild cat" money has played havoc with the Democracy in this presidential campaign. Business men, fearful of a restoration of the inflated and debased currency of years ago, are deserting Cleveland and coming out boldly in favor of Harrison and sound money. They will vote the whole Republican ticket next Tuesday.

Among the latest to renounce Democracy is Frederick P. Olcott, president of the Central Trust Company, of this city, and a life long Democrat.

A Wideawake Business Man.

Few among New York business men stand higher than Mr. Olcott in public esteem. The earnestness of his Democracy was attested by his election in 1876 as compiroller of the state of New York when he ran on the same ticket with Samuel J. Tilden. The widespread evils certain to follow a return to the wildcat currency, coupled with his belief in the policy of a protective tariff, have led him to do as thousands of others intend to do next week, join the Republican cause.

"The policy of the present administration," declares Mr. Olcott, "is well known, and business has accommodated itself to it. Tinkering with the tariff and currency will unsettle affairs, and labor and capital will have to adjust themselves to new conditions, and both will be forced to a lower plane of compensation. I intend to vote for the re-election of President

DEMOCRATIC WILD CAT MONEY

Harrison, as every business man should."

The Republican managers have not been slow to profit by the mistakes and blundering policy of the Democracy. The people have been fully informed of the effect of a return to wild cat money. A clever campaign document is gotten up after the style of the old state bank note, and looks something like the above.

The National Banks.

A comparison of the losses by depositors, note holders and the creditors of national banks in the last thirty years with depositors and note holders of private banks is startling. An examination of the losses through national banks since they were established in 1863 shows that the annual average loss to depositors and other creditors during the entire period has been only one-twentieth of 1 per cent. The comptroller of the currency showed in his report of 1891 that the losses by failures of private banks throughout the country amounted in a single year—1890—to $17,477,419, which exceeds by far the total losses by national banks since their establishment in 1863. This shows the contrast between the condition of the national banks and the private banks of today.

Looking back to the history of private banks when they were permitted to issue currency, the contrast is still more striking. Thompson's Bank Note Reporter for October, 1859, shows the failure of no less than 1,547 banks between Aug. 24 and Nov. 1, of 1857. Another author, "Elliott's Funding System," reports that in the year of 1841 fifty-five state banks, with an aggregate capital of $67,036,265 and a circulation of $22,577,752, failed and that in nearly every instance the entire capital and circulation were lost. Thompson's Bank Note Reporter of Nov. 14, 1858, reports the notes of all banks in Arkansas, Florida, Iowa and Mississippi of doubtful and only nominal value, and the notes of all banks in Wisconsin at a discount of 9 per cent., those of Virginia from 9 to 25 per cent., those of North Carolina 12 per cent, those of Ohio and Indiana from 6 to 50 per cent., and those of Illinois from 9 to 50 per cent.

This is the sort of money to which the Democratic party wants to return.

—Alfred A. Dale, republican candidate for the legislature, is a man of the people. In himself, he represents the workman, the public spirited citizen, the veritable legislator, He is gifted with eloquence and will lead in debate, Mr. Dale is a self made man and may well take pride in the making. In legislative Halls he will reflect honor upon the constituency whom he will represent. Let the vote of Centre county be a splendid testimony to his popularity, a voice of the people, in behalf of one of the people. He first saw the light of day in this county; he has grown up among our people; in his youth and early manhood he was a tiller of the soil; he has always been a worker and has always worked in and for the county of his nativity. There is no man among us more generally or more favorably known, his friends are legion. Hundreds of democrats have expressed a determination to vote for him, many leading men of the county, without regard to political affiliations, are working for his election, and why should they not? In A. A. Dale they recognize a man, a man of the people, a native-born American in whom they can safely put their trust. No man who votes for Dale will ever be ashamed of the vote he casts.

—There could not be a better qualified person for Prothonotary found in this state than John C. Miller. He is a book keeper of years of experience, in fact an expert. He is a grand gentlemanly man, whom it will be a pleasure to do business with. If he lacks in any knowledge of a foreign language he can make up for that by the glib way in which he can rattle off the English, or more properly the American language. We will guarantee that he will find a pleasant and agreeable manner in which to make himself understood to men of all nations who may have business to do with him. We can assure the voters that "it is a cold day" when John gets left on a talk no matter what the subject may be. Our democratic cotemporaries perhaps are not informed of the fact that John has a perfect knowledge of the sign language which enables him to make himself understood by people of all nations. This is an accomplishment posesed by no candidate on the democratic ticket and places John C. Miller in the lead of all as an accomplished conversationalist. Vote for John C. Miller.

—The Republican county ticket is without a weak spot. It is all strong and at no point is it stronger than in the name presented for Associate Judge. Samuel T. Gray is fitted by business experience and genial temperament to fill the office of Associate Judge with fidelity and success, He is deservedly popular with the masses and will no doubt receive an ovation at the polls. He is a christian, a man of business, a man of ability, a man of temperate habits, a man of the highest integrity, a man of the soundest judgment. In fact he is "a combination and form sublime upon which every art conspires to set its seal to give the world assurance of a man." Such a man will honor the position to which the people elect him and it will be an honor to our county and to every man who votes for him to have such a man to serve them. The man will honor the position not the position the man, Vote for Samuel T. Gray.

GET THE VOTE OUT IS THE WATCHWORD.

A Stirring Rallying Call to Every Pennsylvania Republican.

General Reeder's Caution About Casting Ballots as Early as Possible.

He Points Out How Simple a Thing It Is to Mark the Ticket and Urges His Fellow Republicans to All Join in the Work of Rolling Up an Old Time Majority.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 2.

Get out the full Republican vote.

That is to be the watchword of the champions of protection and reciprocity in the Keystone state from now until the polls close at next Tuesday's election. General Reeder has warned the rank and file of the Republican organization of the danger of apathy born of a conviction that Pennsylvania is certainly Republican by a good majority. He has admonished the active party men to miss no opportunity to explain how simple a thing it is to vote under the new law and to take pains to demonstrate that the only thing complicated about the new system is in the certification and printing of the ballot, about which the voter has nothing to do. The part the voter takes is as easy as under the old order of things.

Having made the process of voting perfectly clear it should be the duty of every Republican who takes an interest in the success of the party to point out how important it is that every Republican vote shall be polled next Tuesday, particularly in the close congressional and legislative districts.

A Timely Campaign Card.

General Reeder has issued a little campaign card which Republican committeemen throughout the state are distributing among their neighbors. It is a warning to Republicans to vote early, a call to the party to roll up a splendid majority for Harrison and Reid, and a reiteration of his explanation of how to vote under the new ballot law:

One side of the card reads:

NOVEMBER 8 IS ELECTION DAY

Be sure to vote and VOTE EARLY. Many votes will be lost if there is the usual rush between 5 and 7 o'clock.

VOTE FOR HARRISON AND REID.
VOTE FOR PROTECTION TO LABOR.
VOTE FOR HONEST MONEY.
VOTE FOR YOUR HOMES AND FAMILIES.
VOTE FOR YOUR FARMS AND FIRESIDES.
VOTE FOR AMERICA'S HONOR.
VOTE FOR VICTORY.

BE SURE TO VOTE.

Pennsylvania Republicans must not be weighed in the balance and found wanting.

LET US ROLL UP AN OLD TIME MAJORITY.

On the other side of the card is printed:

HOW TO VOTE.

Marking of the Ticket Under the New Law Is Very Simple.

Place a cross mark (X) in the square to the RIGHT of the word "REPUBLICAN" wherever the word REPUBLICAN appears in the first column of the official ballot.

This is how the ballot appears BEFORE it is marked:

REPUBLICAN

This is how it appears AFTER it is marked:

REPUBLICAN	X

As there are a number of groups of candidates in the Republican (or first) column, the word REPUBLICAN is printed at the top of each group, and a cross must be made TO THE RIGHT of it wherever the word REPUBLICAN appears. Do not pay any attention to the other five columns of the ballot. THE REPUBLICAN NOMINEES ARE ALL IN THE FIRST COLUMN.

FRANK REEDER,
Chairman Republican State Committee.

After reading the above no Republican can have any excuse for remaining away from the polls because of ignorance of how to mark his ticket.

Get out the full Republican vote.

—Vote for Alfred A. Dale for the Legislature. Mr. Dale is all right on all questions that interest Centre county people. He was born in the county and has made this his home all his life. He will watch your interest and serve you as a legislator in an able and intelligent manner. Hundreds of democrats are going to vote for him, His election is as well as assured, by the hundreds of friends he has all over the county, who express their determination to vote for the native born Centre countian.

CORA, the OCTAROON

stranger had suddenly lost his senses.

A quarter of an hour afterward, he was at the Villa Moraquitos.

It was now ten o'clock, and eleven had been appointed for the performance of the marriage ceremony, but neither the bride nor bridemaid had as yet assumed the attire prepared for the occasion, and the elderly bridegroom, Don Juan Moraquitos, paced uneasily up and down his solitary chamber.

The gold-digger was admitted by the mulattress, Pepita. It was she who had carried the note to the hotel.

She conducted him to the elegant boudoir, usually occupied by Camillia Moraquitos and Pauline Corsi, but which was now untenanted.

The stranger gazed around him in bewilderment, but before he could ask a question of Pepita, she had hurried from the room.

He took the note from his waistcoat pocket, and once more devoured its brief contents.

"If Armand Tremlay would ascertain the fate of her whom he once loved, let him call without delay at the Villa Moraquitos."

He read and re-read these words, during the brief interval he had to wait, before he heard light footsteps approaching the door of the room.

The door opened, and Pauline Corsi stood before him.

Another moment, and she was clasped in the stranger's arms.

"Pauline," he exclaimed, "my beloved, my darling, what magic is this? How is it that after thirteen weary years I find you here in America?"

"Because I came hither to see you, Armand! But tell me, before I say another word, have you been to France during the past thirteen years?"

"Seven years ago I was in Paris—seven years ago I returned to my native country, wealthy and distinguished, to fling all at the feet of her, whom I dared to hope might still be faithful. A bitter blow awaited me on my arrival."

"Stay, Armand," said Pauline, laying her hand lightly upon her lover's lips; "tell me all, as it occurred from the first."

She pointed to a sofa and seated herself by the side of Armand Tremlay. Upon a table near her, lay the bridal wreaths, which were to be worn by herself and Camillia. The Frenchman perceived the floral coronets, and asked eagerly.

"These orange blossoms, Pauline, for whom are they intended?"

"You shall know that by-and-by," she answered, with an arch smile; "not another word, until I have heard your story."

An observer would have wondered at the transformation which the presence of Armand Tremlay effected in Pauline Corsi. She was no longer the cold and ambitious woman, but a loving and gentle girl, with the tender light of affection beaming in her blue eyes.

"Tell me," she repeated; "tell me all, Armand!"

"You remember the day upon which the Duke B—— dismissed me from his house."

"Remember it," answered Pauline, "I have good reason to remember it. That day was the turning point of my life."

"And of mine. Reckless and desperate, I strode through the streets of Paris, with my breast rent with contending love and hatred. Love for you, hatred for the conventionalities of rank, which elevated an insurmountable barrier between genius and beauty; but I felt that I had genius, energy, and patience, to conquer fortune—all the gifts which help to make men great; and which the haughty lordling dare not despise, since they are the root of all aristocracies. The very air of France seemed hateful to me, for I despised a country in which the differences of rank could part those whom Heaven had created for each other. I sailed for America, determined that in a free country I would attain such eminence as might entitle me to sue for the hand of a duke's daughter. So enraged was I against the fate which had separated us, that I threw aside my old name, and whatever small degree of distinction might be attached to it, and called myself Forester Townshend."

"And it was thus that my search for you was fruitless," said Pauline; "but go on."

"Under that assumed name I won considerable eminence as a portrait painter, throughout the United States, and seven years after leaving France, had amassed a considerable fortune. I returned to my native country, resolved, if I found you still true to me, to make one more appeal to the duke, and failing in obtaining his consent, to persuade you to agree to a clandestine marriage. On reaching Paris, my first act was to go to the house you had occupied with your supposed father and mother. I was told that the family had removed to Milan. I lost not an hour in traveling to that city, and there I heard from the duke's steward the story of Jeannette's deathbed confession, and the heartless way in which you had been treated, by those who for nearly seventeen years had caressed you as their only child."

"But they never loved me," murmured Pauline.

"No, dearest; it was an heir for a haughty title, and not a father's affections, that they sought. Providence punished their ambition, and terrible retribution overtook them for their cruelty in visiting upon your innocent head the crimes of others. The duchess died, broken-hearted at the discovery of her guilty deception, and the duke was stabbed by an assassin in the streets of Milan. It is thought that this assassin was his kinsman and the heir to his fortune."

Pauline bowed her head in silence.

"This story is very terrible," she said, solemnly; "I had long ago forgiven their wrong to me, in casting me from home and shelter; but I had never forgiven them for parting me from him I loved."

"Dearest Pauline, the ways of Providence are indeed inscrutable. I left Milan, after vainly endeavoring to ascertain whither you had gone after leaving the ducal palace. My inquiries were vain, and my only thought was to find you in Paris, to which city I imagined you had fled. I remained in Paris for three months, during which time I inserted numerous advertisements in the papers, and applied to the police in order to discover your retreat. At the end of that time I began to despair of ever finding you, and I was seized with a gloomy conviction that you had committed suicide in the first moments of your anguish. I left my fortune in the hands of my mother, in whose care it has been accumulating year by year, and withdrawing only sufficient to pay my voyage to America, I once more turned my back upon my native country."

"You returned to America."

"I did, but I was an altered man. I had no longer a purpose to uphold me—the motive for industry was gone. I traveled from city to city, earning plenty of money by my art, but spending it recklessly; and, forgive me, Pauline, wasting it often in the transient excitement of the gaming-table. I was too restless to remain in one place; I sought for change of scene, and for a life of action, for I was forever haunted by the memory of your unhappy fate; and one day I found myself in San Francisco, homeless and penniless. I had flung away my last dollar at the gaming-table. It was then that I resolved on accumulating a second fortune, and returning to France once more to seek for you. A sudden inspiration seemed to take possession of my mind; I felt that in all I had done, I had not done enough, and I determined to redouble my efforts, and devote the remainder of my life to the search for you."

"And you have succeeded."

"Ay, Pauline, in so unlooked for a manner, that I almost doubt now if this is not some strange but rapturous dream."

"You have arrived at New Orleans in time to assist at my wedding."

"Your wedding?"

"Yes, this day I become the wife of a wealthy Spaniard."

"Pauline!"

"Armand!"

She held out her hand to him as she spoke, and in the expression of that one word, "Armand," there was enough to tell him that he had no cause for fear. He lifted the little hand to his lips and covered it with kisses.

He was interrupted by the entrance of the mulattress, Pepita, who brought a sealed packet addressed to Pauline Corsi, in the hand of Silas Craig.

Pauline took the packet, and glanced carelessly at the address.

"Has Mr. Lisimon arrived yet, Pepita?" she asked.

"He has, mademoiselle; he is in the drawing-room."

"Very good, Pepita; and Donna Camillia, where is she?"

"In her own room, mademoiselle."

The mulattress retired. Pauline took the seals off the envelope, and took from it an oblong form. Upon the flap of the envelope, were written these words—

"I send you that which you required of me. The advertisement appears in to-day's paper.—S. C."

"Come, Armand," said Pauline, "I have changed much since you first knew me; the bitter wrongs of my youth had a terrible influence upon my womanhood. I have been ambitious, heartless, mercenary, designing, but with your return my old nature comes back to me, and the fresh feelings of my girlhood revive."

"My dearest Pauline! but this marriage—that bridal wreath."

"Shall be worn by me, but not to-day. Tell me, Armand, do you still love me, the nameless orphan, the spurious child, as you did, when you thought me the heiress of one of Italy's proudest dukes? Have your feelings for me undergone no change since you learned that secret?"

"They have, Pauline, a very great change."

"Armand!"

"Yes, my beloved, and the change is that you are ten times dearer to me to-day than you were ten years ago; for I have known what it is to lose you."

They descended to the drawing-room, where Paul Lisimon was seated in company with two of the most fashionable men in the city; guests who had been invited to witness the intended marriage ceremony.

Every citizen in New Orleans had seen the advertisement in that morning's paper, an advertisement which declared the entire innocence of Paul Lisimon of the crime imputed to him, and described the whole affair as a practical joke.

The young man rose as Pauline Corsi entered the room, and dropping his face, said to her, "I received your letter from the hands of Captain Prendergills, and I am here in answer to your summons."

"And you have seen the advertisement?"

"Yes; tell me in Heaven's name—how did you work so great a miracle?"

Pauline smiled with arch significance.

"When a woman has a powerful will, there is scarcely anything she cannot accomplish. When last we met, Paul Lisimon, I made you a proposal, which you rejected with scorn. In spite of my anger I honored you for that rejection; I am now about to avenge myself."

"How, mademoiselle?"

"I no longer address you as Paul Lisimon; that name is in itself a lie; Paul Crivelli, read this document; it is the genuine will of your father Don Tomaso."

As she spoke, she placed the parchment which had been sent her by Silas Craig, in the hands of the bewildered young man.

This brief dialogue had been spoken in so low a tone as to escape the ears of the two visitors standing by the chimney-piece. It was only overheard by Armand Tremlay, to whom the entire conversation was unintelligible.

At this moment a young mulattress entered the room, and announced "Captain Prendergills."

CHAPTER XXX.

THE SUPPRESSED DOCUMENT.

Augustus Horton left the plantation at daybreak on the morning after the scene between himself and Cora Leslie.

He knew that he had the law upon his side, and that Gilbert Margrave might be made to pay dearly for his abduction of the Octoroon.

But what if Gilbert and Cora should escape, and make their way to the Free States of America?

He was almost mad with fury as this thought arose in his brain. Immediately upon his arrival in New Orleans, he dispatched a messenger for his confederate and evil counselor, Silas Craig, and at nine o'clock the two men were seated opposite to each other at a well furnished breakfast-table.

Augustus was terrified at beholding the change which the last twelve hours had wrought in the appearance of the attorney.

His face was almost ghastly in its corpse-like hue; purple circles surrounded his bloodshot eyes, and his lips were black and dry, like those of a sufferer in the worst stage of fever.

Throughout the weary night he had never ceased to pace up and down the narrow space in his office, pondering upon his interview with Pauline Corsi.

The whole scaffolding of his life had fallen away, leaving him well-nigh crushed amongst the ruins.

The dark labyrinth of crime was closing upon his steps, and he knew not the end which lay before him.

But Augustus Horton was ignorant of the darker crimes which had left their foul stain upon the lawyer's life. He knew him to be an unscrupulous rogue, and associated with him because he was useful.

The first step taken by the two men was to communicate with the police, informing them of the abduction of Cora, and offering a large reward for the apprehension of the fugitives.

This done, Silas Craig told his employer of the advertisement which had been inserted in that day's paper, the advertisement which cleared the character of Paul Lisimon, and described the whole affair of the robbery as a practical joke.

His rage and mortification knew no bounds. He declared that he had been fooled, duped, played with, by Silas Craig, and demanded what right the lawyer had to serve him in this manner.

"Scoundrel!" he said; "you have been bribed by Camillia Moraquitos; that Spanish woman has paid you to betray me."

"You have no need to call hard names, Mr. Horton," answered Silas; "I have been paid by no one. It was necessary to my own welfare to do this; and I have done it. Think yourself lucky that I did not betray you, and let the worthy citizens of New Orleans know your share in the transaction."

Augustus Horton's cheeks and brow flushed purple with suppressed rage. He felt that he was in the attorney's power; and that a word from Silas might blast his name forever.

"Come," he said; "the business is done, it seems; it is therefore too late to talk of it. My first task must be to find this Octoroon and her lover."

"True. Every moment is of value to us if we are not to let them escape."

"Escape!" cried Augustus, furiously; "I would sooner perish in the attempt to overtake them."

"Come, then! the St. Louis packet starts in ten minutes from this time. They may take that opportunity of leaving the city."

The two men hurried to the quay; but they were too late; the steamer had started half an hour earlier than the time mentioned by Silas Craig.

They made inquiries of the clerks about the pier, but no one seemed able to give them any information.

As they were leaving the quay, Silas Craig uttered an exclamation of astonishment on recognizing the lanky figure of William Bowen, who was advancing toward them at a leisurely pace.

The overseer wore a broad-brimmed straw hat, and the light linen coat and trousers customary throughout Louisiana.

"You here, William?" exclaimed Silas, with surprise; "I thought you were at Iberville, where I left you in charge of my plantation."

Bowen laughed, and glanced with rather a peculiar expression at the attorney.

"I know you did," he said: "but you see I've left those parts. I guess I wrote you a letter, Mr. Craig, a week or two ago?"

"You did."

"In which I asked you the loan of a thousand dollars?"

"Why, yes."

"And I guess you refused 'em?"

The attorney bit his lip, and glanced from Augustus to Bowen.

"Ah, I don't mind Mr. Horton knowing our private transactions," said Bill; "I asked for the loan of a paltry thousand dollars, and you refused me. Now, considering all things, I thought this was rather shabby conduct, so I've discharged myself from your employment, and I calculate you'll have to look out for another overseer."

Augustus Horton was prepared to see the attorney resent the insolence of this speech, but to his surprise Silas seemed only too anxious to conciliate Bowen.

"My dear William," he said, "you must remember that you have driven me rather hard lately. However, suppose you call upon me at my office. We'll settle matters there."

"We will settle matters, I reckon, Mr. Craig," answered Bowen, and a close observer might have detected a peculiar significance in his tone.

But Silas Craig was too much agitated to perceive this. He had not yet recovered from the extraordinary revealments made to him in his interview with Pauline Corsi. He felt like a man who walks blindfold upon the verge of a precipice, and who knows that every new footstep may hurl him to the gulf below.

Augustus and the attorney were leaving the quay when William Bowen called after them.

"I guess you were up to something down here, gents," he said; "you were looking after somebody, weren't you?"

"We were," answered Augustus; "we were in search of a runaway slave."

"The gal as you're after is Gerald Leslie's daughter, the Octoroon, I'll lay a hundred dollars?" cried Bowen."

"She is."

The overseer laughed aloud—

"I'm darned if I didn't calculate as much," he said; "then I'm sorry to tell you, Mr. Horton, that the young lady's bolted with that Britisher as was so uncommon peart on board the Selma. They left by the St. Louis packet half an hour ago. I thought there was something in the wind, but I'd no authority to stop 'em."

"D—n!" muttered Augustus Horton; "that Englishman has foiled me at every turn. The next packet for St. Louis starts the day after to-morrow. They'll have eight-and-forty hours start of us, and they'll make their way to a Free State."

He walked away from the quay, followed by Silas Craig.

"If there's law in New Orleans," he cried, "I'll have them overtaken, and brought back."

William Bowen stood for some minutes, watching the two men as they walked away.

"I think I managed that job rather neatly," he said, with a malicious chuckle. "I've paid you out, Mr. Augustus Horton, for any impudence I've ever taken from you; and in a couple of hours more, my friend, Silas Craig, you and I will have squared our accounts for the last time."

Augustus and the attorney walked back to the house of the former, after making arrangements for the pursuit of Cora Leslie and her lover. The planter was maddened by his defeat, and utterly merciless to the unhappy girl who had, for a time at least, escaped from his power.

"I'll have her brought back," he cried, "and lashed as a runaway slave. I'll have her advertised in every paper in Louisiana. I'll spend every dollar I possess rather than let her escape me, and I'll make Gilbert Margrave pay dearly for his insolence."

Silas and the planter found Adelaide Horton and Mrs. Montresor seated beneath the veranda of the morning room, which opened into a small garden.

The weather was so warm, that the two ladies had left the interior of the apartment for the airy shade of this veranda.

We have not seen Adelaide Horton since the scene on board the Selma—that disgraceful scene, in which the young girl had suffered the pangs of jealousy to goad her to an action unworthy the better feelings of her impulsive nature. Bitter and immediate had been the punishment which followed that action.

Despised by the man she had loved, cast off by her cousin and affianced husband, Mortimer Percy; harassed with the tortures of self-reproach, the unhappy girl had ample cause for painful reflection and regret.

She would have made any sacrifice to recall her words of denunciation the moment after their utterance.

The memory of her old friendship for Cora Leslie stung her to the heart, and the mildly reproachful gaze of the Octoroon haunted her perpetually.

Mrs. Montresor had done her best to console her niece; but Adelaide's gayety and light-heartedness had entirely deserted her.

She was no longer the same high-spirited girl who had arrived two months before in New Orleans.

The ladies looked up from their work as Augustus and the lawyer approached them. Adelaide perceived her brother's ill-concealed agitation, and asked the cause of it.

He related his adventure on the quay.

"Then Cora and Gilbert Margrave have left for Saint Louis?"

"They have," answered Augustus with an oath, "but they shall not long escape me. Listen to me, Adelaide; you may wonder at the passion I feel upon this subject, but my pride has been humiliated by the cool insolence of the Octoroon, and whatever motive I may have had for my conduct at the slave-sale yesterday, I have now no purpose but that of bringing Cora Leslie's haughty spirit to the dust. I will have her found and brought back to New Orleans, and I will give her to you as your lady-maid. I know that there is little love lost between you, and that I could not easily inflict a greater humiliation upon my fine lady."

"And you will give her to me?" exclaimed Adelaide with evident delight.

"Yes. I thought you'd like the idea."

"You will give me Cora Leslie?"

"I will. The girl cost me fifty thousand dollars, but I care for nothing now but my revenge. Make her your lady's maid—bring her nose to the grind-stone—let her feel what it is to be the slave of a woman who hates her."

"I will gladly accept your gift, Augustus," said Adelaide, eagerly; "but I fear that you will change your mind."

"No, indeed!"

"Then suppose you write a memorandum of your gift, and sign it in the presence of Mr. Craig and my aunt."

"Willingly," replied Augustus, and seating himself at the table scrawled a few lines, transferring the Octoroon to his sister, and after signing the document, pushed it across to Silas Craig.

"Witness that, Craig," he said, "since my sister is so much afraid of my breaking my word."

Adelaide took up the paper, glanced at its contents, and placed it in the pockets of her dress.

"I cannot tell you, my dear Augustus, how grateful I am to you for this gift," she said, exchanging a look of peculiar significance with her aunt, Mrs. Montresor.

Five minutes afterward, Myra, the Quadroon slave, announced Mr. Leslie and Mr. Percy.

Augustus Horton started at the sound of those names. Mortimer Percy had been absent from New Orleans since the night of the duel between his cousin and Gilbert Margrave. A faint flush suffused the cheek of Adelaide Horton; she felt that she was about to meet the man who had once loved, but now despised her.

Augustus was utterly ignorant that Gerald Leslie had assissted in carrying off the Octoroon; he had recognized no one but Gilbert Margrave, upon the night of the abduction.

The planter received his visitors with cold politeness, but the rat-like eyes of the attorney glanced with a look of hatred at Gerald Leslie.

Mr. Leslie was not alone; Toby, the mulatto, followed him into the garden.

Silas Craig started from his seat with an angry oath. "What brings you here," he cried, "Toby?"

"Do not blame him, Mr. Craig," answered Gerald Leslie, quietly, "it is I who have brought Toby here."

"Oh, it was you, was it? and by what right do you order my slaves about, pray, Mr. Leslie?"

"You will learn that in due time; I have reason to think that Toby's presence will be needed."

The attorney quailed beneath the steady gaze of Gerald Leslie. He felt that some hidden danger was threatened by this visit.

"Pray, Mr. Leslie," said Augustus Horton, "may I venture to ask the motive which has brought you and my cousin to a house in which you can hardly expect to be very welcome?"

"You will very soon know that, Mr. Horton," answered Gerald. "Our visit to-day is to Mr. Craig, rather than to yourself; and our motive in coming to this house is that you may learn the true character of the man whom you have chosen as your associate."

"I require no such teaching, Mr. Leslie," said Augustus haughtily. "Silas Craig, why do you sit there like a stock? Why don't you speak, man; and ask Gerald Leslie what he means by this?"

"Shall I answer that question, Mr. Horton?" replied Leslie. "Silas Craig does not speak because he dares not; because he knows his own guilt, and knows that the seizure and sale of my property, which took place yesterday, was an illegal one."

"Illegal?"

"Yes, illegal; because that seizure was made for a debt which I did not owe. The sole claim which that man, Silas Craig, had upon me, was a debt of one hundred thousand dollars. That debt was paid to him a year ago by my late partner, Philip Treverton."

Silas Craig laughed aloud; but it was a hollow and affected mirth, which could scarcely have deceived the most shallow observer.

"You are either a fool or a madman, Gerald Leslie," he said. "If Philip Treverton had paid the money he would have had a document; who can prove the payment of the debt?"

CAUGHT IN THE ACT.

"It cost so much nowadays to support a wife!" cried impertinent Bryce Thorne, casting a sly glance across the table at Olla Fiske. "I'd propose to somebody I know of this night, if it were not for her expensive habits."

"Pooh! she wouldn't have you," laughed Olla, scornfully, her own dainty tea-gown rather giving point to what Bryce had said. "She'd think it altogether too great a task to be burdened with such a husband as you would make. Think of the cigarettes you fumigate the house with, the tobacco you devour, and—and everything."

"That's it, Miss Olla; give it to him," put in Phinnie St. John, who had a firm belief in what his mother often told him, "Phineas, you've got the stuff in your pockets to carry you through," and therefore did not care how empty of "stuff" his head might be.

"Cigarettes!" repeated Bryce, making a pair of big, round eyes at Miss Fiske. "Cigarettes! Better say something about tea. That's the third cup you've taken this evening, Miss Olivette Fiske."

"I don't care it it is," retorted Olla, with careless serenity. "Tea is fashionable nowadays, and how much do you imbibe of it yourself, Mr. Thorne? You drink far more tea than I do, doesn't he, Mrs. Doane?"

Mrs. Doane's smile was perfectly noncommittal; she was that rarity, a landlady who pleased all her boarders, smiling as sweetly on Phinnie St. John when she said to her, with charming clearness, "I can sling as much fodder down my trunk as the next man," as upon Mrs. Livelign, who was a lady so perfect that no one dared address her for fear of making an error in grammar, or committing a breach of etiquette.

"Mrs. Doane, do I drink as much tea as Miss Fiske?" appealed Bryce, who seemed much hurt by the accusation.

"I really do not know," stammered Mrs. Doane, who would not for worlds express an opinion concerning any of her boarders' appetites.

"Of course not—nobody knows it," resumed Bryce swelling up pompously. "Miss Olivette, I consider that you have slandered me foully, while you—why, you haven't even the face to deny that you have drank three cups of tea this evening!"

"Bryce Thorne, I'll pledge myself to leave off drinking tea if you will. I'll wager a napkin-ring that you will break your pledge before I do."

"Hear, hear! A bet—a bet!" cried Phinnie St. John, jubilantly.

"I'll take you up on that. I'll bet a ring that you will take the first draught."

"A napkin-ring, I said," returned Olla, coloring slightly.

"Very well—you all hear!" cried Bryce, turning to a table full of smiling boarders. "Watch the pantry, Mrs. Doane."

"Not I," returned she. "If Olla gets hungry she can go to the pantry any time she likes."

"Can't I?" exclaimed Bryce in great astonishment.

"Of course," assented Mrs. Doane.

"By Jove! you'll both need watching!" cried Phinnie St. John. "And as I have nothing to do, I'm the one to do it."

"Dear me, Mrs. Doane, sha'n't I put a padlock on the pantry door?" suggested Mr. Shylock, who was a carpenter, bowing politely to his landlady.

After this Olla was obliged to take water at all the little tea-parties where she was invited, and her pretty teagowns seemed almost a mockery to her.

Bryce Thorne and Phinnie St. John followed her about, too, telling the story to everybody; and her friends were laughing, knowing well how much she loved a cheering cup, and how delighted the two young men were with this opportunity of lingering in the wake of pretty Olla.

"Oh, you'll see me around with a napkin-ring hanging to my watch-chain, before long," Bryce would say. "I don't care a thing about the the stuff, you know."

"And Phinnie watched and watched until he grew weary, and began to lose faith in the "stuff" in his pockets, fearing that it would fail to bring him all the prizes of his life after all.

One day he communicated the joyous intelligence to them at luncheon.

"I'm obliged to go away this afternoon. Some of the rest of you will have to watch our two tea-drinkers."

Nobody volunteered, and Phineas did not seem in the least disappointed.

Olla was a copyist, who did her work in her own room, and, toward dusk, her manuscript all daintily finished she sauntered down into the sitting-room.

No one was there. Mrs. Doane was missing, too, and Olla, could not resist a great temptation.

"I'll go down into the kitchen and make me a cup of tea," she laughed to herself. "My head aches so from that everlasting writing, and Bryce Thorne will never know."

Ten minutes later the tea-pot was steaming away gloriously upon the range, and the fumes of Olla's favorite green beverage pervaded all the air.

Horrors! There was a sound of rushing footsteps along the hall.

It could be nobody but Bryce Thorne, for no one else could get away from business at that hour.

Olla had just time to thrust the tea-pot back into the dark corner where it was usually kept by Mrs. Doane.

The door opened, and Olla, from the corner where she had taken refuge, could see Mr. Thorne peering cautiously around.

He entered, and, advancing to the cupboard, he thrust his hand into the very corner which held the tea-pot.

"Gurgle—gurgle—gurgle."

And then:

"Oh, my soul! I've taken it red-hot! My tongue is blistered from the tip to the roots! My teeth are all coming out! My mustache—my mustache——Oh, oh! I've scalded my lips, too, and my mustache will fall out like the down from a scalded goose!"

With a peal of silvery laughter, Olla danced out of her concealment, and Bryce stopped groaning to say indignantly:

"You have lost your wager! You've been drinking tea!"

"No—I only made the tea for you to drink," Olla retorted.

"That's true—every word it!" cried jollified Phinnie St. John, showing his not entirely beautiful face, which had been hidden behind the pantry door. "You see, I suspected you, too, and I hid myself——"

"She drank first, didn't she?" asked Bryce, with tears in his eyes.

"No, but she was just ready to drink when you came in. You have lost your bet, Thorne."

Bryce tried to laugh, but it ended in a grotesque contortion of the lips.

"Well, I don't care," he managed to say, at last. "I'll own right up on the spot. I've been drinking cold tea out of that tea-pot every day for a week past."

Everybody had a laugh over the result of the affair, and then they expected to see Miss Olla's new napkin-ring before long.

It did not come, but instead Phinnie St. John descried a diamond cluster flashing upon Olla's finger.

"Your napkin-ring has contracted somewhat," he said to the young couple that evening.

"Yes," replied Bryce. "She has concluded to make tea for me for life, and I thought this would be most appropriate."

And Phinnie, his hopes forever gone, with his pleasing occupation, felt even more pained than did Bryce the entire week after he was "caught in the act."

Coyote Strategy.

In the dim light of the early morning in certain parts of the Humboldt, Peranegat, Mason, and other valleys may be seen a queer tawny army, marshalled in some places by dozens and in others by scores. The army is called together by a reveille, and soon thereafter the strange music which breaks the stillness of the desert swells into a chorus participated in by all the members of the tawny troop.

It is the gathering of the coyotes, and they are out, their appetites sharpened by the crisp air, to gain their regular breakfast of jerked jackrabbit meat. There is a sniffling among the sage and greasewood by the avant-couriers of the sharp-toothed brigade. Meantime all the others have been deployed in such a manner that when a fleet-footed jack has been raised from his lair he is passed on and on. The coyotes usually arrange themselves in the form of a long ellipse. Thus the jack, however large and strong, and whether fleet as the wind, is sure to at last weary himself.

He cannot get out, for a wily coyote at every turn checks him and keeps him in the ellipse and in the lead of his pursuer. When the coyote in pursuit tires another, fresh as the air of the morning, takes up the chase. Thus an untiring Nemesis is always after him, and in due time the tired, panting rabbit falls a prey to the yellow troop.

At the death they all rush in, their jaws working like fast-flying shear blades. The rabbit is cut in pieces, snapped up and eaten, and then another weird reveille is sounded, another jack is started up, and thus they go for two or three hours sometimes until the hunger of all is appeased.

This hunting in troops, as is pointed out by Col. Joseph Grandelmyer, the sagebrush pioneer, enables each of the brigade of the coyotes to get a good meal. If but one of the coyotes were to start after the rapidly flying jack he would become quickly winded without affecting the jack whatever, but with relays of coyotes, and one always to take up the chase when the other is tired, victory soon perches on their banner.

Grandelmyer insists that the coyote army is the most scientifically generalled. The comander-in-chief, a veteran of the chase, usually sits on some slight eminence, his lieutenant and aids being in full view to repeat his orders.

"Never was there a better drilled army than this of the coyotes," said he yesterday. "What they don't know about manoeuvring, ambuscades, and the tactics of the field generally it will take a long time to find out. I have studied them much. It is one of the most interesting sights of the desert to see the marshaling of the coyotes at the sounding of the weird reveille and watch their capture of the rabbits."—San Francisco Examiner.

He Made Us Free.

As flame streams upward, so my longing thought
Flies up with thee,
Thou God and Savior, who hast truly wrought
Life out of death, and to us, loving, brought
A fresh, new world, and in thy sweet chains caught,
And made us free!

As hyacinth makes way from out the dark,
My soul awakes,
At thought of thee, like sap beneath the bark;
As little violets in field and park
Rise to the trilling thrush and meadow lark,
Nev hope it takes.

As thou goest upward through the nameless space
We call the sky,
Like jonquil perfume softly falls thy grace;
It seems to touch and brighten every place,
Fresh flowers crown our wan and weary race,
O thou on high.

Hadst thou not risen, there would be no joy
Upon earth's sod;
Life would be still with us a wound or toy,
A cloud without the sun—O babe, O boy,
O man of mother pure, with no alloy,
O risen God!

Thou, God and king, didst "mingle in the game,"
(Cease, all fears, cease!)
For love of us—not to give Virgil's fame
Or Croesus' wealth, not to make well the lame,
Or save the sinner from deserved shame,
But for sweet peace!

For peace, for joy—not that the slave might lie
In luxury;
Not that all woe from us should always fly,
Or golden crops with Syrian roses vie
In every field, but in thy peace to die
And rise—be free!
—Maurice Francis Egan.

Would you rather buy lamp-chimneys, one a week the year round, or one that lasts till some accident breaks it?

Common glass may break or not the minute you light your lamp; if not, the first draft may break it; if not, it may break from a mere whim.

Tough glass chimneys, Macbeth's "Pearl-top" or "Pearl-glass," almost never break from heat, not one in a hundred.

Where can you get it? and what does it cost?

Your dealer knows where and how much. It costs more than common glass; and may be, he thinks tough glass isn't good for his business.

BEWARE OF OINTMENTS FOR CATARRH THAT CONTAINS MERCURY,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it thought the mucus surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

I have been a great sufferer from dry catarrh for many years, and I tried many remedies, but none did me so much benefit as Ely's Cream Balm. It completely cured me. M. J. Lally, 39 Woodward Ave., Boston Highlands, Mass.

After using Ely's Cream Balm two months I was surprised to find that the right nostril, which was closed for over twenty years, was open and free as the other, and can use it now as I could not do for many years. I feel very thankful.—R. H. Cressenghaun, 275 18th St. Brooklyn.

SOLDIERS WILL MAN THE POLLS.

War Veterans Show Appreciation of Harrison's Patriotism.

To Labor on Election Day to Get Out a Big Vote.

They Will Direct Particular Attention to Insure the Election of Republican Members of the Legislature, so as to Guarantee the Return of a Republican to the United States Senate.

PHILADELHHIA, Nov. 2.

The activity of the veteran Union soldiers of Pennsylvania in this campaign is best shown by the efforts of the War Veterans' club, of this city, and similar organizations throughout the state to get out a full vote for the whole Republican ticket next Tuesday. Union veterans all over the country are taking a deep interest in General Harrison's candidacy.

Captain John Taylor, president of the War Veterans' club, has just sent out a letter to many comrades throughout the state, in which he says:

BENJAMIN HARRISON.

AND HIS ATTITUDE TOWARD THE SOLDIERS.

"We should not be satisfied with the re-election of President Harrison simply. Let us make sure the election of Republican congressmen, wherever possible; also the election of Republican state senators and members of the assembly, for, in January next, the legislature will elect a United States senator. Let us be sure that he is not only a Republican, but a soldier. How can we be certain of this? By turning in with a will, and insuring the election of Republican candidates for the state senate and the assembly in our respective counties. Let us give particular attention to this. Pennsylvania is safe for Harrison by an overwhelming majority. Let our especial energies among our relatives and friends be given in behalf of the senatorial and legislative candidates from this time forward. We must not forget that there are twice as many "Rebel Brigadiers" in the United States senate as there are union soldiers. Nor must we forget that if the Republican majority in the United States senate is wiped out—and the senate is now almost a tie—and the Democrats retain control of the house, there will be very little chance for pension legislation for a generation or more.

"Let us turn to, therefore, with a will in behalf of the whole Republican ticket, giving especial attention to the candidates for congress, state senate and the legislature."

Cleveland's Anti-Soldier Record.

Enclosed with this letter was a very telling document contrasting the records of Cleveland and Harrison towards the Union soldiers. This is cleverly done by means of the "deadly parallel column."

In the first column Cleveland is represented as turning his back toward the soldier. Following is his "war record," in which it is stated that he was an able bodied man when drafted, but served his country by a substitute, whom he permitted to die in a poorhouse. He never visited the army in the field or hospital, where a sick or wounded soldier lay, to offer his sympathy or aid. He never contributed a dollar to the sanitary or Christian commission. While governor of New York he vetoed a bill to punish dead beats and beggars, who were never soldiers, for wearing G. A. R. badges. As president, he vetoed 524 pension bills, which was more than were vetoed by all the presidents who preceded him in the White House. It remained for Cleveland to be the first president to fill his veto messages with jests and sneers at the men who saved the nation.

GROVER CLEVELAND

General Harrison's brilliant war record is given in the adjoining column.

Early in the war he raised a regiment, and was its colonel. Colonel Harrison was a disciplinarian, yet his men loved and honored him. His sympathy with the sick and dying was deep and sincere. He was courageous. No danger made him flinch. His regiment shared his courage, and made for itself a lasting fame.

Harrison's noble record as president is then given. During the Fifty-first congress he approved 1,367 private pension bills, many of which had been vetoed by Cleveland. He also approved the dependent pension bill (vetoed by Cleveland), which a Republican congress had re-enacted at the request of the Grand Army of the Republic.

WHAT IS THE MATTER

Time A Halt Was Called Before We Go Farther.

IT IS CERTAINLY MOST DANGEROUS GROUND WE ARE TREADING.

It Is Time We Looked The Matter In The Face.

AND DECIDED JUST WHAT WE HAD BETTER DO.

DO NOT DELAY, FOR DELAY MAY BE FATAL!

What is the matter?

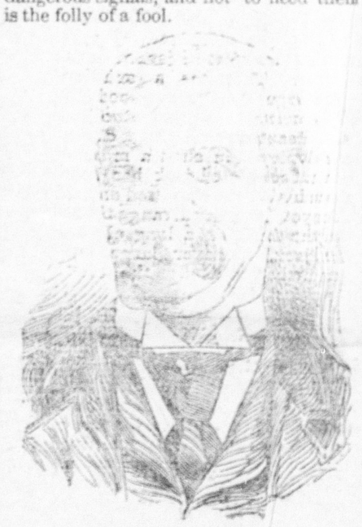
Why do so many people, like Senator Plumb, Senator Zach Chandler, Congressman Ray and Secretary Windham drop suddenly dead?

Only what is the matter with thousands upon thousands of others, brain and nerve exhaustion from overwork, fret and worry and the cares and anxieties of the pushing and hustling age in which we live, and which finally end in the dread paresis, insanity, heart failure, nervous prostration and sudden death.

Men without number are straining their brains and nervous systems in the mad race after fortune and fame, and exhausting their nervous and physical energies, until sleepless nights, failing power, complete nervous exhaustion, paralysis, insanity or death must be the inevitable end unless help from some source is received.

Thousands of women are overworked, exhausted, worn out in nerve force and power until they feel tired all the time. Clerks, students, mechanics and laborers, from close confinement, long hours, strain upon the nerve, dissipation or other causes are losing their vitality, and becoming nervous and physical wrecks.

You, reader, are rushing on blindly to sure destruction. You are warned every day and every hour of yor impending doom. How? By those strange sensations, that dull, dizzy and bad feeling head, that restlessness, irritability and nervousness; by those more or less sleepless nights, from which you wake tired and unrefreshed; by the weak, trembling, cold limbs, by the languore and sense of nervous and physical exhaustion which grow upon you more and more. These are dangerous signals, and not to heed them is the folly of a fool.



ANDREW H. OLNEY, ESQ.

What is to be done? The answer is plain enough. You are losing your nerve force and power, and running down in strength, energy and vitality. Whatever will restore this lost strength and vigor to the brain and nerves, will put you again in sound health and strength. This is preciously what Dr. Green's Nervura, and great blood, brain and nerve invigorant, will do. As a restorer of nerve force, a builder up of nerve power, vigor and energy, this wonderful remedy has no equal in the world. You can have no idea until you try it of its marvellous toning, strengthening and invigorating effects, its beneficial and healthful action as a brain and nerve restorative. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless, and can be purchased at any druggist for $1.

Read what it did for Andrew H. Olney, Esq., of Gibson, N. Y.

"I was broken down with nervous and physical prostration," he says, "before using Dr. Green's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and life was a burden. Now life is a joy, and sleep is a luxury compared to it before taking Nervura. I relish my food and my nervousness has left me; so has the numbness. I wish I could shout loud enough so all the world could hear, and tell them the good this wonderful medicine has done for me. It has made me from a weak, trembling, nervous, irritable man, to one who feels he is on the highway to long years of health and happiness through Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and the blessing of God."

Can you do better than to use it?

Especially as it is not a patent medicine but the prescription and discovery of the eminent physician, Dr. Greene of 25 West 14th street, New York., the most successful specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases in this county. He can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

VILE AND UNWORTY

Of consideration are nostrums of which it is asserted—and there are many such—that they cure immediately bodily ailments of long standing. There are none such that can. Chronic disorders cannot be instantaneously removed. Continuity in the use of a genuine medicine, such as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, will eradicate chronic physical evils. Not the least of these last in the force of its opposition to medicine is constipation, to the removal of which, if presisted in, the Bitters is particularly adapted. Constriction of the bowels is a complaint which should be dealt with early and systematically. So are its usual attendants, liver complaint and dyspepsia. For these, for malaria, rheumatism, kidney trouble, and more recently "lagrippe," this highly and professionally commended medicine is an undoubted specific. Nothing can exceed it, moreover, as a means of imparting strength to the feeble and nervous.

—Vote early next Tuesday, many votes will be lost if there is the usual rush, between 5 and 7 o'clock in the evening.

BLAINE AND QUAY LEAD THE FIGHT.

Differences at Minneapolis Forgotton in the Cause of the Republican Party.

President Harrison Has Now No More Earnest and Active Supporters.

They Are of Invaluable Assistance to Chairman Carter at the National Headquarters, and Their Efforts Have Given Encouragement and Confidence All Along the Republican Lines.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.

The active part taken by ex-Secretary Blaine and Senator Quay in the direction of the presidential canvass has inspired Republicans throughout the country and given assurance to all that the party is united. With all elements in the Republican organization working in harmony and earnestly desirous of success, President Harrison's re-election is certain.

Blaine and Quay have given Chairman Carter the benefit of their knowledge of practical politics, and each has been doing his utmost to bring out the full Republican strength on election day.

Blaine's Call to Arms.

Ex-Secretary Blaine's short speech at Ophir Farm meant many thousands of votes for the Republican candidates.

Mr. Blaine's appeal to Irish-American voters to support the Republican party as the party which represents all that they contended for in the land of their birth, and to reject the Democratic party as the party which is operating in this country in the interest of their hereditary enemy, will not be lightly considered by Irish voters. For many years Mr. Blaine has been to them an ideal American, and simply because he is an ideal Republican. He has stood stoutly for American citizenship and American rights in all circumstances and against all menaces. This is why he has won the admiration of Irishmen as of all other classes of our population.

The ex-secretary has done yeoman service in other directions, and nowhere as in Pennsylvania, where he has for years been the idol of many Republican hearts, will there be a more enthusiastic and prompt response to his clarion call to rally to the support of Harrison and the whole Republican ticket.

Quay Blocking Tammany Again.

Senator Quay, though in poor health, he not having entirely recovered from the strain upon his system incident to his services in the last national campaign, has been doing great work at headquarters. The ex-chairman has given the Republican organization the benefit of all the means he resorted to four years ago to thwart Democratic schemes to corrupt the ballot. He has made a careful study of the new election law passed by Hill to make the Empire state safe for the Democracy, and has taken steps to check Tammany Hall in the desperate game that is being played to roll up an immense majority for Cleveland in this city.

Senator Quay's presence here and frequent conferences with the leaders has given encouragement and confidence to all Republicans throughout the state. The organization is in line and equipped for victory under shrewd and brilliant leadership.

Mr. Carter's Denial.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Mr. Thomas H. Carter, chairman of the Republican national committee, denied today that either he or any member of the national Republican committee had been in communication with H. C. Frick, of the Carnegie Homestead works. "The report," said Mr. Carter, "was evidently put in circulation for the purpose of exciting prejudice against the committee and the cause it represents. Neither Mr. Frick nor Mr. Carnegie has thought proper to contribute one cent to the fund of this committee. The story is false from end to end."

WHY HARRITY IS MUCH DISTRESSED.

The Irish-American Vote Swings Around to Harrison.

Cleveland to be Cut Frightfully in New York.

General Admiration of the President's Manly Foreign Policy and His Patriotic and Successful Efforts to Protect American Citizens Abroad.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.

The Democratic managers are very much disturbed over what they fear is a pronounced split in the Irish-American Democratic vote.

Chairman Harrity has counted all along on having enlisted a sufficient number of prominent Irish-Americans to hold that vote for Cleveland, but the ringing words of Mr. Blaine and the evidence of England's deep interest in the outcome of the election have brought about a change which the Democrats fear will greatly reduce the vote in New York.

MacVeagh as a Burchard.

Then, again, Wayne MacVeagh essayed the role of a Burchard for Cleveland when he attacked President Harrison in his recent speech in Philadelphia for the appointment of Patrick Egan as minister to Chile. He greatly incensed Irish-American citizens. Many Democrats roundly denounce him, and say that if President Harrison is to be assailed for appointing Irish-Americans to responsible places of trust and honor they will openly support him at the polls.

Among the men whose effective work among the Irish-American voters is keeping Chairman Harrity awake o' nights is ex-Congressman John F. Finerty, of Chicago, who is speaking every night for the Republican ticket.

Mr. Finerty is known all over the country as an earnest champion of the rights of the Irish people, and he is respected by all. He has just returned from a trip through the state.

Large and Enthusiastic Meetings.

"I think the situation in New York has improved greatly," said Mr. Finerty last night. "The Republicans are waking up and holding large and enthusiastic meetings. We had about 4,500 people at Syracuse the other night in the Alhambra and about 2,000 at Utica, where the hall was so crowded that many could not get in. We had large meetings during the week at Troy and West Troy. Democrats attended as well as Republicans. In Syracuse alone there were over 1,000 Irish Republicans. Some of the leading merchants around Syracuse are Irish-Americans, and are strong for Harrison and protection. I have found among that branch of the population no toleration for free trade doctrines. The remarks of Mr. Blaine will arouse intense enthusiasm throughout the state."

Minister Egan Talks.

United States Minister to Chile Patrick Egan had this to say: "I have had many opportunities for observation since my return, and am convinced that there is no question about the success of the Republican ticket. From many parts of New York and other states I have had pressing invitations to receptions from committees composed of both Republicans and Democrats. Many of them I shall be able to accept."

John Brennan, of Iowa, who has for five weeks been speaking in the campaign, and within the past year has traveled extensively all over the country, was at Republican national headquarters yesterday morning. He said:

About the "Irish Vote."

"The politicians have strange ideas in relation to what is commonly called the Irish vote. In the first place, it will be well to remember that we have voting in New York state not a mass of ignorant men such as we might have seen forty years ago, but an army of well informed and enlightened men, capable of acting for themselves in elections. On our side there is now a great number of Irish-Americans, every man of whom is a recruiting officer and a sentinel of civilization in the locality in which he resides. President Harrison will receive a larger vote from Irish-Americans than he received in 1888, or than Blaine received in 1884. There are many thousands of thoughtful Irishmen who vote the Democratic ticket in local elections who will vote the national Republican ticket."

Many Clubs Formed.

There are over thirty Irish-American Republican clubs in this city, and all are actively at work for the maintenance of the present tariff policy. Representatives from each association met National Committeeman R. C. Kerens and determined to issue an address to the Irish-American voters of the country. This will recite the many reasons why Irish-Americans should have no sympathy with the ticket and policy distinctively British in its tendencies, and which would if successful prove a victory for British rather than American interests. Speaking of the movement Mr. Kerens said today:

"A great many Irish voters who four years ago did not join with us in support of Harrison have since had their eyes opened by the policy pursued by the Democratic party. They are with us now. We have lost none of those who broke from their Democratic moorings eight or four years ago, so that I believe that Harrison will get more Irish-American votes than have ever been cast for a Republican candidate."

To vote the full Republican ticket place a cross mark in the square to the right of the word Republican, thus:

REPUBLICAN	X

wherever the word Republican appears on the official ballot. Nothing could be simpler.

His Magical Influence Unimpaired.

Blaine has answered the assertions of his enemies and rebuked the misgivings of his friends by coming out boldly for the Republican ticket. His speech at Ophir Farm was brief, but to the point, and the way it has been received all over the country proves that he has not lost any of his old-time influence on the people. It is as true now as ever that,

"One blast upon his bugle horn
Is worth a thousand men."
—Troy Budget.

A STARTLING FACT.

SIXTEEN PER CENT. OF LIFE INSURANCE APPLICANTS REJECTED ON ACCOUNT OF DISEASED KIDNEYS.

The Trouble Comes From Lack of Care.

Dr. Lambert the general medical director of the Equitable Life Insurance Company, N. Y., said:

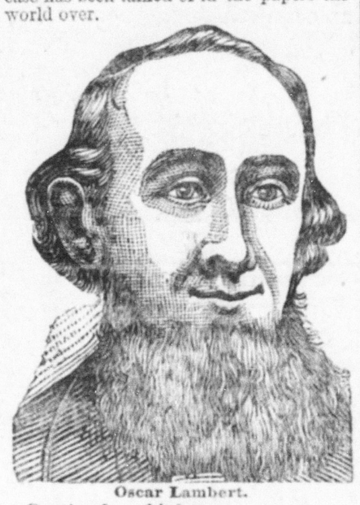
"We reject sixteen per cent. of the applications made to us for insurance, and I have saved the entire expense of this medical department, by the rejection alone of applicants who had diseased kidneys, and who died within two years after I rejected them."

This appalling statement coming as it does, from such high medical authority, should have the attention of our citizens. There is no reason to-day, why people should allow kidney disease to get such a hold on them.

Nature sends her warning in the slight pain in the back, poor circulation of the blood, sediment in the urine. When any of these symptoms appear, Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy should be taken in small doses at once, and thus drive the poison out of the blood and restore the kidneys to healthy action.

To our knowledge this is the only medicine that surely and effectually cures this almost universal complaint.

We note the happy recovery of Mr. Oscar Lambert, of Jerico, Mo., whose case has been talked of in the papers the world over.



Oscar Lambert.

Quoting from his letter.

"I neglected the first symptoms until I found myself in bed with a complicated disease of the kidneys. No mortal ever suffered more and lived. My physician failed to help me. I then used Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, made at Rondout, N. Y. It relieved my kidneys almost immediately, and in a few weeks I was clear of all pain, and entirely cured. I owe my present lease of life to Favorite Remedy."

It is used and recommended for what it accomplishes. Writes Mrs. A. J. F. Manchester, from Providence, R. I.

"I began using Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy for kidney disease, when Doctors failed to relieve me. It drove a bad humor out of my blood, cured my kidney trouble, and I am truthful when I say it saved my life."

Wm. Huston the popular West Shore R. R. engineer, came out in an open letter stating how he had suffered with kidney disease. Physicians treatment, and the use of various preparations failed to benefit him. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, was procured and it made him well.

Favorite Remedy has had more free advertising in the columns of the daily papers, than anything we know of, from the fact that it does as is promised. "cures disease."

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy possesses marvelous strength giving qualities, that render it especialy, valuable to the aged or infirm. For a general all around tonic, and to cure any disease arising from an impure condition of the blood, it has no equal. Druggists are selling more of it than all others combined

ON THE WAY TO PARADISE.

Let us hope that the people who habitually disregard their health will reach that desirable place, and avoid the locality which is less desirable as an eternal residence on account of the heat and surroundings generally. But while we tarry in this vale of tears, why should we voluntarily endure the tortures of dyspepsia when a systematic use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will rid us of the atrocious malady which—unless physicians are very much at fault—tends to shorten the term of our existence. Heartburn, biliousness, constipation almost always accompany this complaint and are symptomatic of it. These are all extinguished by the Bitters, which also conquers completely malaria, rheumatism, nervousness and debility. Since the appearance of "la grippe" it has shown a singular mastery over this formidable complaint that has carried off so many of our brightest and best.

JAMES G. BLAINE'S BOLD BUGLE BLAST.

The Plumed Knight Again Thrills the Republican Hosts.

His Head and Heart Are in the Fight for Harrison.

The Brilliant and Honored Statesmen of Maine Calls on His Friends and American Citizens Generally to Stand by the Party of Protection and Reciprocity.

The active interest which ex-Secretary Blaine is taking in the success of the ticket has aroused great enthusiasm among his friends everywhere. The Republican prospects in New York and throughout all the northern states, which have been encouraging from the start, it is said now will receive an enormous impetus all over the country through the prestige of the united efforts of such men as Blaine, Quay, Reed and Platt. Ex-Secretary Blaine's recent utterances have attracted widespread attention. Comment by newspapers throughout the country indicate that his ringing words will have great influence in the coming election. The Republican hosts have been thrilled by his bugle blast. They are responding loyally and promptly to his call to arms. Here are some expressions on Blaine's attitude in the campaign that tell their own story:

Against British Free Trade.

No portion of Mr. Blaine's masterly address on the issues of the campaign has attracted greater attention or aroused more Democratic alarm than the striking sentences in which he appeals to Irish-Americans to support the cause of American protection against the attacks of the adherents of British free trade. Mr. Blaine said, "I have a word to say about the Irish vote. I see it stated that the Democrats boast of having the mass of them in their ranks this year. It is one of the mysteries of our politics that a question which interests England so supremely, which is canvassed almost as much in London as it is in New York, should have the Irish vote on the side of Great Britain. If the Irish vote were solidly for protection they could defy all the machinations of the Democratic party for free trade, and throw their influence on the side of the home market of America against the tide of the foreign markets of England. I know this appeal has been frequently made to the Irish voters, but I make it with emphasis now, for I am unwilling to believe that with the light of knowledge before them they will deliberately be on the side of their former oppressors."—New York Press.

A Splendid Statement of the Issues.

No more compact summary of the vital questions of the campaign has yet been made, not even by Mr. Blaine himself. He pins the opposition down to their own chosen issues, and exposes the folly and dishonesty of their claims. He disposes of the charges against the tariff by ready reference to familiar facts and figures, newly marshalled in his own inimitable way, challenges the enemy to make a single criticism upon Mr. Harrison's administration, and startles a great number of the Democratic rank and file with a pertinent question as to why they are there. In half a dozen sentences he sets both parties thinking and brings out with impressive force the half forgotten fact that the Democrats have been on the defensive since the canvass began.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Blaine Men Among the Best Workers

Their confidence (the Republicans) in his loyalty and sound judgment has not been misplaced. The name of James G. Blaine today carries more weight and exerts a wider influence than ever before in the course of his long and brilliant career. That the great leader of Republican thought, the man who beyond all others has the power to awaken Republican enthusiasm, has now taken his rightful place in the forefront of the Republican line of battle puts new life into the rank and file of the party and makes certain the triumph of Republican principles at the polls. Mr. Blaine and the men who supported him at Minneapolis are in the front ranks of the battle which is being waged against the enemies of American enterprise and industry.—Albany Journal.

Peculiarly Revered by the Irish.

No American statesman has the confidence and the admiration of the Irish-American race to a greater extent than James G. Blaine. His hold on their affections arises, first of all, from his intense Americanism, and, second, because the Celtic blood courses in his veins. His fame as a statesman is part of the history of their race. He stands out among the MacMahons of France, the Spanish O'Donnells and the Austrian Nugents. When, therefore, Mr. Blaine speaks to this portion of his countrymen his voice carries with it a weight and a force second to that of no man living. Sober and solemn words he addressed to them last Friday evening from the steps of Mr. Reid's house in Westchester county.—New York Recorder.

A Solemn Thought for Irishmen.

Ireland has always furnished to the English army the bravest and most reliable element it contains. But the Irish soldier who wears the scarlet uniform and fights under the English flag is at least paid for his work, and he receives his share of the glories and honors that crown the victories he wins. But the Irish-American who fights England's battle in the United States by voting the Democratic free trade ticket gets nothing for his pains. His voluntary service only increases the contempt in which England holds him; his offered sacrifice of his own and his children's bread to increase England's wealth is only rated as another proof of his incapacity for self government.—Brooklyn Times.

Head and Heart in It.

Mr. Blaine's head and heart are in this campaign, as they have been in every Republican campaign for thirty-six years. He cannot now bear the brunt as in other days. His health and his sorrows forbid the same degree of work. But he is the same earnest Republican, and his inspiration quickens the enthusiam and activity of Republicans everywhere. Republicans wanted to see his plume in the fight, and it is there. Mr. Blaine addressed himself to the west as well as to the east, and pointed out the fallacies of Democratic claims. His words will have a far reaching effect. They emphasize the unity and solidity of the Republican ranks.—Philadelphia Press.

"Dear friend of women:

"When my baby was born, five years ago, I got up in six days. Far too soon. Result: falling of the womb. Ever since I've been miserable.

"I tried everything: doctors, medicines, apparatus; but grew worse.

"I could hardly stand; and walking without support was impossible.

"At last I saw an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and decided to try it. The effect was astonishing. Since I took the first bottle my womb has not troubled me, and, thanks only to you, I am now well. Every suffering woman should know how reliable your compound is. It is a sure cure."

A UNITED STATES SENATORSHIP AT STAKE.

Republicans of Pennsylvania Must Maintain Control of the Legislature.

A Democratic Scheme to "Michiganize" the State.

SECRET MEETINGS BEING HELD.

Dire Results that Would Ensue from the Election of a Democratic Legislature with a Democratic Governor Already at Harrisburg. Marriott Brosius Sounds a Timely Warning to All Republicans.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 26.

The discovery was made a few days ago that Chairman Wright, of the Democratic state committee, was going through the state addressing secret meetings of Democrats and assuring them that there was no doubt of their electing a majority of the legislature if they worked quietly and effectively to that end. Privately, Chairman Wright has been boasting that the next United States senator from Pennsylvania will be a Democrat. He can only base hope in this direction upon Republican apathy or indifference.

To remove even occasion for possibility of a calamity such as this would be, an alarm has been sounded all along the Republican lines. Every citizen is cautioned against frittering away his vote on any side issues or independent candidates.

Great Interests at Stake.

The continuance of Republican control in the United States senate is absolutely essential to the existence of the thousands of industries of the state that are maintained by the Republican protective tariff.

The farmer, as well as the manufacturer and the workingman, has a direct interest in the election of a Republican legislature, which will next January elect a United States senator.

With a Democratic governor already seated in Harrisburg, the election of a Democratic legislature would be disastrous to the Republican party as well as to the agricultural, industrial and mercantile interests of the commonwealth. It would mean a reapportionment which would largely increase the Democratic representation in congress from this state. It would mean a redistricting of the state that would insure a Democratic majority in the state senate probably for years. It would mean the wiping out of many legislative districts that are now reliably Republican. It would mean radical changes in the whole machinery of the state government in both the executive and legislative branches.

To "Michiganize" the State.

And what else would it mean but an immediate effort to "Michiganize" the state? With absolute power to carry such a scheme into effect, the Democracy would fairly be expected to pass a law requiring the presidential electors to be chosen in congressional districts. Thus they might gain nine and possibly ten of Pennsylvania's electoral votes for the next Democratic candidate for president.

The far reaching effect of Democratic success in the legislative canvass in this state makes it important that every Republican vote shall be polled for the regular Republican nominee for state senator or state representative in every close district. There are a number of districts in which hard work will have to be done to elect Republicans to the legislature and to which attention it now directed.

Marriott Brosius' Ringing Words.

Congressman Marriott Brosius, a great favorite of farmers of Pennsylvania, was among the visitors at the Republican state headquarters this week. He chatted entainingly about the situation in the state. He has been an earnest worker on the stump from the beginning of the campaign. This popular Lancaster county representative touched upon the legislative canvass and the importance of polling every Republican vote in every close senatorial or representative district.

"It will be well for us," said Congressman Brosius, "if we appreciate the points of our position which are most exposed to danger and endeavor to guard them against the flank movements of the enemy. 'The wise man foreseeth the danger and shunneth it, but the foolish pass on and are punished,' is a proverb most timely at this juncture in the canvass. One of the dangers against which we must guard is an inclination in many good people to take revenge, or administer a rebuke, or gratify a pique, or promote what has been styled 'purity in politics' by cutting a Republican candidate. If practiced to any considerable extent this may lead to consequences not only not intended, but very much to be regretted. In many sections the sharpest contests will occur on candidates for the legislature, which will elect a United States senator.

The United States Senate Close.

"In view of the extremely narrow margin now existing between the parties in the United States senate, and the possible loss of one or two Republican senators, despite anything we can do to prevent it, it is plainly seen by any one at all acquainted with the situation what a little feebleness of attachment to our standard bearers may do. A little misdirected zeal in the prosecution of collateral purposes at the expense of the chief objects of all our exertions—the election of our ticket and the maintenance of our principles—may result in the defeat of enough Republican candidates for the legislature to enable that body to elect a Democratic United States senator. Thus, in the event of Democratic success in the Electoral college, we would not only be turning over the legislation of the state to the Democracy, but for the first time in thirty-two years placing the entire government of the country in the hands of those who are but waiting an opportunity to apply in the administration of government a body of principles and policies which will put in intant peril the great principles which have distinguished Republican administrations, and jeopardize the great American industries and interests which have been the ceaseless objects of Republican solicitude for thirty years.

Republicans Should Look Ahead.

"We are all too deeply sensible of the nature of such a calamity to voluntarily do anything to bring that about. But what we do from the best motives sometimes, from lack of sufficient consideration of results not so obvious as to be immediately seen, become the very instrument of our own destruction. So the Republican who, for whatever purposes, cuts a candidate for the legislature on his ticket places himself in the position of becoming responsible for the election of a Democratic United States senator, with all the appalling consequences which may ensue from that event.

"I do not envy the Republican who is willing to assume that responsibility. I do not believe there is a Republican who is ambitious for such a distinction, or who would not resent with contemptuous scorn the imputation of such a purpose. It is possible, however, by underestimating this danger, and exaggerating the importance of carrying out some personal view or subserving some local purpose, that the very best Republican might unwittingly achieve this unenviable distinction. It is to put us on our guard in a matter of the greatest moment that I refer to this subject, that Republicans, loyal and true to the great party which has shed such a fadeless lustre upon our country's history, shall not, for lack of thought, do that which in its result may be as calamitous as sleeping on their posts, or deserting to the enemy."

THE TARIFF PROVIDES WORK FOR THOUSANDS.

What It Has Done in Developing the Pearl Button Industry.

American Workingmen Given a New Field of Labor at Good Wages in Two Hundred Large Factories, and More Are Coming.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.

The development of the pearl button industry under the fostering provisions of the McKinley act has surpassed even the most sanguine expectations of the pearl button trade. To a reporter who called at the office of the Standard Pearl Button company, of Detroit, at No. 345 and 347 Broadway, New York, William H. Leland, a stockholder and representative of the company, said:

"Under the old order of things we dealt in imported goods only, no manufacturer worthy of the name being in existence in this country. The buttons were made principally in Austria, and a skilled operator there—a man with a wife and family helping him—does not make on an average more than $3.50 a week.

"Under the change brought about by the McKinley act our company has been incorporated with a capital of $600,000. We employ 400 American workingmen and women, with a prospect of an increase to 700 within the next three months, and have a daily output of 5,000 gross. The pauper labor of Europe has given way to the employment of Americans at the highest wages paid anywhere in the world. We use machinery of the most improved kind, and our buttons give satisfaction in every instance, both as to quality and price. Before the McKinley act went into effect there were not more than twenty factories in the United States, with about a thousand people to run them, but as soon as we awoke to the fact that American industries must be protected, up went the number of factories to 200 and the number of employes to almost 8,000.

"Letters from manufacturers continue to come in and they all have the same statement, that the demand for American made buttons exceeds by far the supply."

Another leading manufacturer said: "Free traders will do well to avoid making any reference to the American pearl buttons when they wish to make an important point. This industry under the new tariff had a very large protective duty placed on it, yet such were the peculiar conditions under which the business in foreign countries was operated that this duty was necessary. When the American pearl button makers had to face the competition of Birmingham they found it very close sailing, but still they could exist; but when some years ago Vienna taskmasters reduced the wages of their poverty stricken employes to the starvation point the American manufacturer had to withdraw from the field, as the conditions under which his workmen lived made him unable to compete. The result was that the domestic industry was almost killed. While foreign pearl buttons were sold in this country at low prices, yet it is a fact well known to those in the trade that middlemen reaped larger profits than they were entitled to.

"It is simple ignorance to talk, in the face of such a rate of remuneration, about the American's right to buy in the cheapest market and to say that in the end these matters will regulate themselves, because we as a people insist on our working classes living in a condition of decency in respect to dwellings and sanitary arrangements. We compel them directly or indirectly to contribute to the support of the public schools, and a large number help to support churches as well. If we insist on exposing our industries to the competition of the class of labor referred to, it will only be logical to take from the working classes the expense of maintaining the sanitary and educational features, and this the American people will never consent to do.

"The pearl button industry is one of those which proves that no horizontal rule can be applied to all cases, and it establishes the fact that an adequate protective duty, where needed, is not only beneficial to the country at large, but also that it is right and fair to all concerned."

A Thoroughly Loyal Republican.

That was a peculiarly happy and effective speech which Mr. Blaine made to the Westchester county residents who called on him at Whitelaw Reid's home yesterday. Because of domestic bereavement and recent severe illness, no one expected that Mr. Blaine would take an active part in the work of the campaign or make any stump speeches. But his little talk yesterday shows how true he is to Republican principles and how earnest is his support of the party's candidate.—Troy Times.

FOR FREE TRADERS.

Interesting Questions Propounded by a Protectionist

That Can be Fired in Volleys at the the Democrats of Pennsylvania from Now Until Election Day.

If protection makes millionaires, why have nine in ten of the large fortunes in America been amassed in the so-called non-protected industries?

If protection does not maintain American wages, why are they about twice as high as in any other country under the sun?

If protection is an absurdity, how does it happen that it has converted to its doctrines the greatest statesmen and countries in Europe and the world?

If free trade would benefit American agriculture, why has it impoverished the farmers of England, Ireland, India, and wherever it has been tried?

If free trade would help this country generally, why did it plunge us into bankruptcy and misery every single time it has been tried here?

If protection oppresses the common people, why was George Washington a protectionist?

If free trade elevates labor, why were the slave holders free traders?

If reciprocity is a humburg, why are free traders so anxious to make the point that "it is only another name for free trade, anyhow?"

If the adoption of Cleveland's tariff policy in this country would not benefit England, why are the English press and public so earnest in their advocacy of his election?

If Cleveland is brave and honest, why did he try to straddle the tariff issue, which he himself raised in 1888 and again in 1892?

If the McKinley act raises prices of manufactures, why are they lower now than before it became a law?

If it lowers wages, why are wages higher now than before it passed?

If protection was unjust, why was Abraham Lincoln a protectionist?

What Protection Means.

If it oppresses farmers, why were they the ones to vote for its inauguration, and why have they more steadfastly than any other class of citizens voted to maintain it?

If a nation must buy in order to sell, why was the balance of trade in our favor more than $892,000,000 in the past year?

If strikes are due to the tariff, why are there two strikes in free trade England to every one in the United States?

If protection is unconstitutional, why were the framers of the constitution protectionists?

If free traders are really the friends of the farmers, why did they abolish the duty on the farmers' wool?

If free raw materials would give us the "market of the world," why are our imports of cotton goods far in excess of our exports?

If the protected United States is not prosperous, why are we the only nation in the wide world that has no emigrants?

If protection is opposed on the ground that our industries are no longer "infants," why doesn't the Cobdenite support the tin plate duty?

If our higher wages are due to the greater efficiency of American workingmen, why do foreigners who come here receive two and three times as much as is paid for the same work in their own country?

If the house of representatives was not laboring in the interests of the British cordage trust, why did it pass the free binding twine bill?

If a revenue tariff does not cause pauperism, why were there more paupers in New York during the revenue tariff of '49 than ever before or ever after?

If free trade is patriotic, why do free traders always sneer at everything American?

THROUGH DANA'S GLASSES.

How the Veteran New York Democrat Sized up Grover.

In February last Mr. B. J. Sheridan, through The Western Spirit, a newspaper published at Paoli, Miami county, Kan., inquired of Mr. Charles A. Dana, editor of the New York Sun, why he so bitterly opposed the renomination of Grover Cleveland for the presidency. To which Mr. Dana replied in the following direct manner:

1. Because Grover Cleveland is not a Jeffersonian Democrat.

2. Because he is not a Democrat at all, but first, last and exclusively a promoter of Grover Cleveland.

3. Because, though elected president of the United States as a Democrat, his administration was not conducted for the establishment of Democratic ideas or for the benefit of the Democracy, but for the personal aggrandizement of Grover Cleveland and the exaltation of his own preposterous self conceit.

4. Because in pursuit of his own cranky and whimsical notions, he adopted the anti-Democratic Chinese system of literary examinations as the test of admission into the civil service of the government.

5. Because he wrecked the Democracy in 1888 by interjecting into the platform the doctrine of free trade, to be realized through a free trade reform of the tariff, to the exclusion of every other reform thereof.

6. Because he is now professing to be devoted to the anti-Democratic Australian scheme for the abolition of the well-established Democratic policy of universal suffrage.

7. Because, in the language of Mr. Tilden, "he is the most selfish politician I have ever known."

8. Because, under his lead, if he could lead anything but the schemes of his own ignorant, narrow and fruitless mind, the Democracy would be led to fatal defeat.

And all that Mr. Dana said of Grover Cleveland then is true of Grover Cleveland now, and thousands of Democrats in this state believe precisely as he does. Mr. Dana has gone to Europe in order to be saved the ignominy and humiliation of supporting Cleveland, but he has left instructions that his newspaper is to keep up the fight against the awful force bill spook.

Earle Chester Tuten, manager of the Eureka Grocery store High street, next door to Post office, is getting there with any of them, he sells goods as cheap as the cheapest and they are warranted as to quality. He has a very efficient help in Geo Marshal, a clerk of thirty years experience. Call and see them they will reat you right.

FOR OVER THREE MONTHS my son suffered night and day with rheumatism: so much that he was unable to feed himself. Your Sulphur Bitters cured him, and I am truly thankful to say they are an honest medicine—Mrs. W. H. CARLETON, wife of Deacon Carleton, First Baptist Church, Winchester, Mass.

--ARE YOU A CHRISTIAN?

MR. EDITOR:—Some time ago as I was traveling along the street a friend caught up with me and put the above question squarely to me: "Are You a Christian?" I hesitated a little and said: "I hope that I am ." "Ah!" said he, "That is all wrong; why not say positively that you are a Christian. You do not hesitate to say what your politics is; if you are a Democrat, Republican or Prohibitionist you say so. Then if you profess to be a Christian, why not say so positively?" As this friend was in a hurry and the question was too large a one to answer it through the Republican.

What constitutes a Christian is the first thought that comes to my mind. What is it to be a Christian? It seems that the disciples were Christians first in Antioch and the name was evidently used then as a term of reproach or contempt. The word occurs only three times in the New Testament scriptures. And while this name was first given a term of reproach on the street with your permission I will answer in the New Testament scriptures. And while this name was first given as a term of reproach, to-day it is the most honorable name that any one can possible possess. But it is only the true believer and follower of Christ who can claim this title. He must be regenerated or born again; he must be pure, humble, pious, devout, reverent, godly, heavenly minded, spiritual, saintly and saint-like, believing, faithful and true. I am glad this good brother feels that he possesses all these qualities and can say without hesitation he is a Christian.

I have in my weak way been trying to follow Christ, for many years, and have found it a pleasant service and while I have often followed at a great distance, I have never had a single desire to turn back. I feel that I love the brethren, but I am not so certain that I can love and pray for my enemies like the Master and Stephen did. And when I look back over my Christian life and see how many mistakes I have made, how many opportunities for doing good I have let pass by unimproved, this brother will have to excuse me if I can only say to-day I hope I am a Christian. To be a Christian and a politician are entirely different things. A man chooses his politics himself and can easily say at any time to which party he belongs, and just according to his ability he becomes popular with them. But not so with the Christian. God makes the choice. "No man can come to me except the Father which hath sent me draw him." And it is only those that endure to the end that shall be saved, and can truly claim to be Christians.

Christ was wholly unselfish. He spent his entire life even unto the death, for others. And those who would be His followers must imitate His example. They must live, not for themselves, but for the good of others. They must dare to do right and what He has commanded them to do even at the risk of life and property. All this the Apostles did even to death itself. Paul says, "hope maketh not ashamed." Wherefore not ashamed." Peter says, "Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ."

I therefore feel determined, God helping me, to follow on and if I should not be able by the way like this good brother to say positively, "I know I am a Christian,' I shall still live in hope that at the end of the race I may be able to say: "For I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day."

Hope.

Ripans Tabules: standard remedy.

When Charlemagne and his "Knights of the Round Table" were making war on the Saracens, in Africa, it frequently happened that Knights on either side would fight in single combat for the honor of their respective armies. The Saracens had been, for many years, the scourge—the dreaded invaders—of Europe, and all waged war against this common enemy.

But in these days the worst scourge that threatens us, is that dread invader, Consumption.

Consumption fastens its hold upon its victims while they are unconscious of its approach. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has cured thousands of cases of this most fatal of maladies. But it must be taken before the disease is too far advanced in order to be effective. If taken in time, and given a fair trial, it will cure, or money paid for it will be refunded.

For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Asthma, severe Coughs, and kindred affections, it is an unequaled remedy.

For all diseases that arise from a torpid liver and impure blood, nothing can take the place of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Nothing will, after you have seen what it does. It prevents and cures by removing the cause. It invigorates the liver, purifies the blood, sharpens the appetite improves digestion, and builds up both strength and flesh, when reduced below the standard of health.

—Vote as early in the day as possible.

—A. C. Mingle is having a handsome porch built to his house on East High St.

—Vote for Samuel T. Gray for Associate Judge, every good democrat will vote for Gray.

We heard a man on the street a day or so ago call candidate Schofield, a flannel mouthed Irshman this is the meanest thing we have heard this campaign.

James Schofield, claims that he is an English gentleman from Belfast. James why do you not run for parliament from the Belfast district instead of coming over her to run for the legislature from Centre county.

—A vote for Samuel T. Gray for Associate Judge, is a vote for a christian man, a temperance man, a man who keeps holy the Sabbath day, a man who never takes the name of his God in vain. It is such a man who should be judge in a christian community, it is not a question of party.

—Alfred A. Dale, one of our candidates for the legislature is doing great work and meeting with flattering success. The prospect of his election is said to be good, by men who ought to know. The sentiment of the people seems to be for him. He will make a first class legislator. Vote for Dale.

—A young man by the name of Charles Heslin, who had been working at State College, came to Bellefonte Wednesday of last week to go to Lock Haven. As he found he had several hours to wait before a train was going his way he concluded to jump the freight and go to Milesburg and take the train from there. The train was on the move and in trying to get on he slipped and his toes were mashed under the wheels. Dr. Geo. F. Harris dressed his wounds and he left on the afternoon train for his destination. He had a lucky escape, although it is bad enough as it is for the poor fellow. Jumping the freight is dangerous business.

TWO MORE FIRES.

A Big One Sunday Morning and a Dangerous One Monday Night.

Just as the residents of Bellefonte are congratulating themselves on the town's escape from fire they find themselves, as it were, and the town burned and destroyed and threatened until fear takes the place of congratulations and no one goes to bed at night save with a chill of fear and a dread lest they be rudely awakened to find their own house, or perhaps place of business either on fire or in great danger. Two such experiences within forty hours is what Bellefonters have been called upon to endure.

It was just about 1.50 o'clock Sunday morning when the sleepy residents of the town were suddenly aroused by the sounding of the fire alarm giving the signal for the South Ward. A brilliant light in that direction was information sufficient for the most sleepy individual that a large fire was raging somewhere, and that somewhere proved to be among the numerous stables and outbuildings in the rear of the new Bush Arcade, extending from the top of the high bank on Water street to within a hundred feet of Spring street.

From the most authentic sources it was learned that the fire started in an old ice house, from there spreading to an old oil house, a store house and stable owned by Mrs. Bush, then Garman's stable and finally Dr. Hayes' stable. These buildings were all on fire by the time the fire companies got every-thing in working order and nothing could be done to save any of them from destruction.

In Mrs. Bush's stable were two cows, one horse, two buggies, one carriage and a truck wagon. All this property including the horse, with the exception of the two cows which fortunately were gotten out, was destroyed. In the store house were numerous tools, and various articles of repair, which was also destroyed. In Dr. Hayes' stable was a horse, two buggies several sets of harness, etc. The horse, one buggy and one set of harness was saved, all the rest burned. In Garman's stable was one three-seated carriage, one two-seated carriage, several buggies and five or six sleighs, valued at about $2,000, all of which were destroyed.

From the stable the fire communicated to the Bush Arcade and for a time it looked as if the eastern end of that block was doomed. The windows were all aflame and the eaves and rafters burned six feet up under the tin roof. However, by dint of hard work on the part of the firemen from the outside and a number of persons on the intside with a small hose this fire was put out without doing over a thousand dollars worth of damage. All the windows in the third story from the post-office up were burned out and several skylights burned and broken. The stock in W. T. Twitmire's tin and stove store was badly damaged by water as was also that in Bush's stationary story.

In the meantime, notwithstandtng the vigilance of the firemen, the roof on Dr. R. G. Hayes' house (the Sommerville residence) took fire and burned down to the second story. It was only by dint of the hardest fighting that the flames were checked there. During all the time the fire was raging the wind was blowing a perfect hurricane and it looked very much as if the entire South ward was doomed. If the fire had once got across Spring street with a fair start all the firemen in Centre county couldn't have stopped it. Several buildings did take fire on the roof from falling sparks but being carefully watched the incipient blaze was always promptly extinguished. It was six o'clock in the morning before all danger was past and the firemen felt justified in withdrawing there apparatus.

The entire loss on all property burned will aggregate $20,000, on which there was an insurance of between $10,000 and $12,000.

Monday Night's Blaze.

It was just a few minutes past 9 o'clock on Monday evening when the people were again startled by the cry of fire and the sounding of the fire alarm. This time the fire proved to be in the cellar of V. Bauer's grocery store, in the brick block owned by Geo. W. Jackson on Allegheny street. By the time the firemen arrived on the ground a perfect volume of smoke was pouring out of the cellar, and it was impossible to go in there to fight the flames. The cellar windows were broken open and three streams turned in literally flooding the cellar and drowning the fire out. The front door was also broken open and as soon as the room and cellar were clear enough of smoke the firemen went in and down. All the flames were out and just in time. The fire proved to have been about the the middle of the building and close to a couple barrels of oil. One barrel was almost burned through. The joist were also burned off and the floor almost through If the fire had originated one hour later it would likely have proven a most disastrous conflagration, and would have been attended with great loss of property and probably life, as a number of families occupy thec seond and third stories of the block. As it was the damage will not be great only what was caused by the water and smoke. It will probably not exceed one thousand or fifteen hundred dollars. Mr. Bauer explains the origin of the fire as occasioned by the explosion of a kerosene lamp, which had been forgotten and was left burning in the cellar.

The frequency of the fires in Bellefonte is alarming the citizens of the town and they feel like taking some prompt measures to put a stop to it. A man is not safe in his own habitation and his business is likewise in constant danger. The origin of this last fire as above explained was due only to carelessness, but the origin of Sunday morning's blaze is still a mystery. It is said that a party of four young men had been in the old ice house late Saturday night smoking and drinking. If this is so the mystery might be thus explained.

VERY DRY WEATHER.

We are experiencing at the present time one of the most severe droughts that we have had in a great many years. In many places throughout the state and county farmers are compelled to haul water for miles for their stock. Wells and cisterns are becoming dry, large river beds are almost bare the water being so low that they can be forded on the rocks without the danger of wet feet. Springs that never before were known to fail have become completely dried up. Water that is used for drinking purposes on account of its scarcity is poor in quality, causing great danger to the general health; so great is this danger that boards of health are recommending that all drinking water should be first boiled. While this is the condition of affairs in many places, Bellefonte has from its beautiful spring an abundance of clear, crystal water to use for all purposes. Her great spring shows no effect of the drought but continues to receive from its hidden source as great a supply as ever. Fifteen thousand gallons of water a minute pours forth, the same to day as it has in all the days and years that are past, a beverage prepared by God himself to nourish and invigrate his creatures. What a great blessing this is to us, especially now when others are compelled to be so careful and we are favored with abundance. Indeed Bellefonte is greatly favored in her beautiful spring.

AN EVENING MUSICALE.

The church Guild, of St. John's church, held an informal Musical at Mrs Geo Valentines on Monday evening. It was a very enjoyable affair from beginning to end and the ladies realized for their labors between $20 and $25, which will be added to that already raised for the repairing of the church organ. The first number on the programme was a solo entitled, "A Fair Garden," by Mrs. Kate Burnett. Mrs Burnett also favored the audience, later in the evening, with another solo, "The Daily Question," and in answer to an encore sang "Beautiful Eyes". We are always glad to hear Mrs. Burnett.

The pantomime burlesque on "Fair Lochinvar" was very mirth producing.

For instrumental music there was a piano duet by Messrs. Cruse and Brandon. Both gentlemen also pleased the audience by rendering a piano solo in so acceptable a manner as to call forth an encore. A charade, the answer to which was "Ingratiate," was well acted by Miss Mary Valentine and Mr. John Blanchard.

The remaining soloists of the evening were Miss Victorine Lyon, who delighted the audience with two selections; and Miss Sarah Valentine, who rendered, in a very acceptable manner, a selection from Faust.

Too much credit can not be given to Mrs. Benton, the director and accompanist, for the efforts to make the evening a success.

To vote the full Republican ticket place a cross mark in the square to the right of the word Republican, thus:

MOSHANON ITEMS.

We noticed two of our school teachers going out hunting lately but are not informed whether they got anything or not.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fye were visiting friends at Gorden Heights last Sunday.

Miss Dollie Yeager visited at Pine Glenn a few days last week.

Thomas and Philip went hunting last week. Thomas says Philip shot four times at a pheasant and missed it every time. This was the only shot they had, so got no game. Try again, gentlemen.

Lemuel Lucas took a day hunting last week.

Fietta B. Fries, Bella walker and Mattie Fye made a pleasant call at W. F. Handscome's on Sunday evening, and were welcomed by his son Abraham.

We noticed Mrs. Bridget Kerns on our streets last Sunday evening.

Mr. Abraham Handscom and Arthur Yonders called on John Smoke on Sunday.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, OCT. 31, '92

The President returned to the White House even more bowed down with grief, if such a thing could be possible, than he was when he left for Indianapolis on the train carrying the remains of Mrs. Harrison. He will endeavor by plunging into the work pertaining to his official duties, which has accumulated during the weeks his attention was given almost entirely to the dying woman he loved so well, to take his mind in a measure, at least, from his grief. He will take no further open part in the campaign for his re-election, and the engagements he had made some time ago to speak in Indiana have all been cancelled. In addition to Indiana it had been expected before the death of Mrs. Harrison that the President would consent to make at least one speech in New York and one in Illinois, but now he will not be asked to do either. His grief is to real and too recent for him to to take any interest in things political, or in fact in anything, for a while. His compaign is in good hands, and unless all the information coming to Washington is erroneous, his re-election is assured.

It is evident from the news from all sources that the campaign in West Virginia is the hottiest ever seen in that state. The latest wrinkle to get out big crowds to the democratic meetings is for the railroads to carry passengers free from the surrounding country to the point at which the meeting is held. Ex-Senator Camden, who is a power in railroad circles in that State, and who is anxious to return to the Senate if the democrats can retain control of the legislature, is the originator of this scheme. It makes crowds but it will make no votes; on the contrary, it is calculated to loose some that would otherwise have gone to the democrats. No democrat in Washington will put up a cent on West Virginia, and many of them openly concede it to the republicans.

The democrats made a big mistake when they attempted to make it appear that Ex-Pension Commissioner Tanner was luke warm in his support of the Presidental ticket, and was writing letters calculated to help the democrats. This is the way that plain spoken Corporal answers the charge:—"There is not a drop of democratic blood in my veins, nor does that party have any of my sympathy or encouragement. I am a republican because I believe in the principles of the party, and expect to remain such."

A very conservative estimate of the result of the election, which gives the three votes of Nevada to Weaver and puts Delaware, Connecticut, New Jersey, New York and West Virginia, several of which are certain to go republican, into the doubtful column, gives Harrison and Reid a certain vote in the electoral college of 225, or two more than is necessary to elect This estimate concedes Alabama to Cleveland, which is more than the average republican will do; it also gives Cleveland Tennessee and North Carolina, in which states many well informed people believe there is a fighting chance to elect Anti-Cleveland electors.

This week every member of the Cabinet, except Secretaries John W. Foster and Tracy, will make one or more speeches for the national ticket, and the latter may consent as he is being warmly urged, to make one speech in Brooklyn, his home. Secretary Rusk will do his talking in Wisconsin, Secretary Noble in Missouri, Attorney General Miller and Secretary Elkins in West Virginia, Postmaster General Wanamaker in Pennsylvania and in Indiana and Secretary Chas. Foster in Ohio.

All of the news receive din Washington tends to increase republican confidence. Indiana is now conceded to the republicans by many democrats, likewise Connecticut, whereas ten days ago they were stoutly claiming both states. Of New York, without which Cleveland cannot possibly win in the electoral college, no well informed democrat. speaking privately, will claim more than that it is doubtful and that Cleveland has as good a chance to carry it as Harrison. Only a few days ago the same democrats refused to admit that Harrison had even a chance in New York.

Another straw showing the direction of the political wind has blown to the surface when within the last forty eight hours the Washington Correspondents of a dozen of the biggest newspapers in the country, covering every shade of political opinion, were instructed by wire from their home office to ascertain if possible what, if any, changes there would be in the Cabinet if the President was re-elected. You may be sure that his would not have been done unless those editors felt reasonably certain that Harrison would win.

DIED.—At Bellefonte on Friday morning, Oct. 27, at twenty five minutes past two in the morning, Willie Dunham, aged six years, three months and two days.

On Saturday evening, at half past six o'clock, Alverda May Dunham, aged eight years, two months and twenty five days. These two children were the only children of Mr. and Mrs. Dunham. Thus at one blow has this once happy home been made entirely desolate by the terrible disease that has for a month past or more scourged our town. It is a sad experience; only those who have met with such a loss can realize how terrible a calamity it is and only a heart of stone could refuse to mingle tears with theirs in this hour of their deep affliction. On account of the contageous nature of their complaint no public funeral was held. They were buried at Howard on Saturday. Mrs. Dunham is overcome with grief and overwork. Only time can soften this terrible affliction to them.

A CARLISLE WEDDING.

Carlisle Sentinel gives the following account of a wedding that was attended by our fellow townsmen, John A. Walker, who is bookkeeper for McCalmont & Co. It may prove of interest to our readers especially the friends of Mr. Walker:

A pretty home wedding took place at the "Oak Grove" farm, the residence of the late Sterrett Woods, a short distance southwest of Carlisle, just before noon on Wednesday. It was the marriage of Charles A. Parkinson, the popular Carlisle furniture dealer, and Miss Sarah Woods, daughter of the late Sterrett Woods.

The parlors of the family residence were handsomely and appropriately decorated for the occasion and fully a hundred guests from Carlisle and abroad were in attendance. The ceremony, (and the beautiful ring ceremony of the Methodist Episcopal church, was used,) took place promptly at 12 a. m., Rev. W. W. Evans, D. D. of Harrisburg, officiating. The bridesmaids were Miss Winnifred Woods, sister of the bride, and Miss Edith Flickinger, of Fannettsburg, Pa., and the groomsmen were John Bridges, of Carlisle, and John A. Walker, of Bellefonte. Among those present were the mother of the groom and the mother of the bride. The presents were numerous and handsome.

After the ceremony the newly married couple left by the 12:10 p. m. train, on the Philadelphia and Reading, for Baltimore and Washington. Upon their return they will take up their residence in Carlisle.

The bride is a well known Carlisle lady, sister of R. W. Woods, Esq., and the groom is one of Carlisle's leading business men.

A bounteous repast was spread, but the bride and groom had left on the train and were not among those who participated in the festivities that followed the marriage.

THIS IS THE LAST

Opportunity we will have to urge upon all our readers and the public generally to be right when they cast their vote for Associate Judge next Tuesday. There are three candidates in the field to choose from. William Thompson, prohibition, who, though he may be a good enough man, stands no more chance of being elected than the man in the moon, hence why should you throw away your vote on him if you desire to perpetuate good government. Corlis Faulkner, democrat, who the whiskey element regardless of party affiliations, have sworn to elect, that there may be no discrimination in the granting of licenses; that whoever asks may receive and that whiskey may flow like water. Then we have Samuel T. Gray, one of the most conservative and best men in Centre county. A man who is known because of his strong adherence to the cause of temperance; a man who would use all his influence to diminish rather than increase the number of licenses in the county; a man who thus has the welfare of every mother's child at heart. This is the kind of a man the republican party presents and asks for him your suffrage. Vote for him and you vote for good government, a good cause and a good man. Vote for Faulkner and you vote for a bad cause, indifferent government and a man who the most of his life has sold liquor. Is it necessary to ask "which will you choose?" The majority of the Centre county voters are too enlightened and love good government two well to risk anything in casting their ballots for Faulkner, but will see to it that Samuel T. Gray is elected and that by a good big majority.

RESOLUTIONS OF CONDOLENCE.

At a late meeting of Gregg Post, no 95. G. A. R., the following resolutions of condolence were adopted:

"WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God, in His divine providence to visit with death, the home of the President of the United States, and take from him his beloved wife, and take from the nation a most modest, dignified and exemplary woman, one whose public life as the "Lady of the White House," has exhibited the highest type of true American womanhood, who has been an honor to our country, and has commanded the greatest respect. admiration and affection of the American people; therefore

Resolved, That we regard the death of Mrs. President Harrison, as national bereavement, and that with profound sorrow, submissively bow to the Divine will, in visiting upon the nation this sore affliction,

Resolved, That we sympathize with President Harrison, in this the greatest trial and bereavement which any man can be called upon to experience, and we most earnestly assure him, that in the irreparable loss he has sustained, in the death of his beloved wife, the equal partner of his joys and sorrow in life and the sharer of his adversities and honors, we extend to him our heart felt sorrow and condolence, not only as citizens of our common community, but especially as members of the Grand Army of the Republic, of which he is a most honored member, and sincerely pray that God who "tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," may sustain and comfort him in this the darkest hour of life's severest trial.

Resolved, That we profoundly sympathize with the members of the President's family in their great loss and bereavement.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the President.

JNO. G. LOVE, Chairman

MARRIED.

W. E. Houck, of Philipsburg, Pa., and Miss Emma E. Glossner, of Woodward township, were united in marrage on Tuesday evening. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. A. Bender at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Glossner, in Woodward township. F. E. Houck, of Tyrone brother of the groom, acted as best man and Miss Jennie Glossner, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid. The flower girls consisted of seven young ladies, dressed in white. They composed the Sabbath school class of the bride. The wedding march was played by Miss Bertha McGhee, of Eagleville. An elegant wedding supper was served to about seventy guests. The young people who have thus taken upon themselves the duties, joys and sorrows of married life are a worthy couple and highly respected by all who know them. They start out in life with a bright future and the blessings and best wishes of their hosts of friends go with them. The happy couple went direct to Philipsburg, where they will make their home.—Lock Haven Democrat.

AT HOWARD ON COLUMBUS DAY.

They had quite an impcsing celebration of Columbus day at Howard, on Oct. 21. The parade is said to have been participated in by over four hundred people, all carrying flags, which produced a very pleasing effect. All the school children participated. The procession was headed by Nittany Hall band. After marching through the principal streets they were massed in the school house yard and the following program was gone through with Opening prayer by Rev. N. B. Smith, of the M. E. church; singing of America by the school; speech by Rev. N. B. Smith; raising of flag and music by the band; singing of "Columbus" by the school; speech by Rev. W. W. Bruder, of the Evangelical church.

The speakers of the day not being present John Hamilton, of State College, was called upon and responded with a speech that pleased all. The G. A. R. and the P. O. S. of A. took an active part in the ceremonies of the day, turning out in full uniforms in the parade. E. W. Kline, principal of the schools, was master of ceremony.

—The Tyrone Herald of last week said that William T. Meyer, of Bellefonte, in the pursuance of his calling as piano tuner is in Tyrone for a few days. Mr. Meyer resided here many years ago when he was a teacher of music, and he started Billy Canan on the road to musical fame away back in the seventies. He is also a composer of some note and one of his early compositions was entitled the "Tyrone March."

—Urge on the work, the time is near at hand.
